

Corpus Christi.

LAUDA TION.

Beloved Son, praises sing
To Christ, your Saviour, Pastor, King.
Let echoes through the vault rebound,
While hymns and canticles resound.

No Exemption for Women and Girls.

Our bright Nova Scotia contemporary,
the CASKET, has a long editorial on the brutalities committed by some of our army officers in the Philippines.

We must confess that the barbarous treatment of the Filipino by such American officers as Waller and General Smith surpasses in its devilry anything perpetrated by Weyler in Cuba, or by Kitchener
in Egypt or South Africa.

To exonerate himself and his country
from the crime of shooting non-combatants, General Kitchener deemed it necessary to have certain brutes in uniform executed and others imprisoned for life, and the civilized world will always remember
it to his honor.

Not many years ago the American people were shocked by the reported cruelties of Weyler, and now they see one of their own generals issuing an order in comparison with which the Spanish general's conduct assumes the appearance of benevolence.

The Holy Shroud at Turin.

M. Vignon read a most interesting paper at the last meeting of the Academy of Sciences and exhibited some photographs
which he had taken of the winding sheet
preserved at Turin and traditionally said
to be that of Christ.

Any idea of fraud need not be considered,
for no one has touched this winding sheet since 1353, and no painter at that date had the skill to reproduce such an exact drawing. The impression of the head is excellent. The wounds produced by the crown of thorns and the marks of the blood drops are quite obvious.

The remarkable description which appears in our Paris notes of the photographs taken by M. Vignon seems to justify the belief that the human body is either radioactive or that it gives off "vapours" which exhibit a similar action to light upon sensitive surfaces.

In the case of the sheet in which tradition
says that the dead Christ was wrapped,
we have the analogue probably of a photographic plate or sensitized film. The cloth was impregnated with oils and aloes. It is well known that fixed oils are sensitive to oxidation and aloes contains constituents allied to the pyrogallic acid series, which would probably turn brown in the presence of an oxidizing process.

In a Tight Place.

A good many years ago, when subscriptions were being solicited for the erection of a statue in New York City to President Washington, a gentleman called for a contribution from Mr. R., an old resident, who, although wealthy, was a little 'near.'

On learning the object of his visit, Mr.
R. exclaimed: 'Washington, Washington!
Why Washington does not need a statue.
I keep him enshrined in my heart!'

In vain did the visitor urge his suit. He was unable to obtain the slightest encouragement, and finally rose to leave. Taking his hat, and indignant at the parsimon-iousness of the millionaire, he remarked:
'Well! Mr. R., all I can say is, that if the Father of his Country is in the position
in which you describe him, he's in a pretty tight place!'

The ablest and best analytical chemists

Diamond Dyes are the purest and best dyestuffs for home dyeing. All the colors

As there are imitations of the popular Diamond Dyes, ladies should be careful of dealers who attempt to recommend the worthless makes. It should be remembered that these imitation dyes are made up of poisonous and dangerous adulterations,

Diamond Dyes are so easy to use that even

A MAZE OF PATRIMONY.

(Wm. Lampton, in The Pittsburg Observer.)

As soon as her daughter appeared next evening Mrs. Andrews evinced a noticeable anxiety.

'What's his other name?' she asked before Claire had her hat off.

'Oh, don't ask me! Don't talk about him! Don't mention the word romance or sentiment or heroism or any of them,' raved Claire, wildly beating the air with her hands.

'Dear me, dear me,' soothed her mother. 'What's in a name, anyway? Wouldn't you just as soon be Mrs. Morley as Mrs.
Burton?'

'Whether I would or not,' exclaimed
Claire, slinging her wraps across the room,
'I won't be. There's already one.'

'What? The mysterious mister, the oldest only, the heroic life preserver isn't a prosaic, every-day married man, is he?'
laughed Mrs. Andrews.

'Yes, he is, and his wife is as young as I am, and prettier,' moaned Clair. 'She came in this morning with him, and Mr.
Burton introduced me to both of them.
And he didn't say a word about our romance.'

'Did Mr. Burton know anything about it?' asked her mother.

'You mean Mr. Morley. He didn't seem to, as if he were afraid of his wife. He might at least have spoken of having seen me before.'

'Claire raved on and Mrs. Andrews was untiring in her efforts to assuage the poignancy of her grief, but had not succeeded at eight o'clock when the sorely stricken young woman went off with a gay party to the theatre.

The next evening when she returned from the office something had very painfully happened. Claire was radiant.

'And now what?' greeted her mother.

'More developments. Only think of it;
his name isn't Frank, either.'

'Not Frank?' questioned Mrs. Andrews.

'Is it Francis or Franklin?'

'Neither.'

'Nor Morley either?'

'Yes, Morley; Alfred Morley. Alfred is prettier than Frank, don't you think?'

'Never having seen either of the young men,' replied Mrs. Andrews, affecting the serious, 'I cannot at present say which I think is prettier.'

'Oh, you know I mean their names.'

'But you said yesterday his name was Frank,' argued Mrs. Andrews, passing the previous question.

'I know I did, ma mere, but I didn't know what I was talking about. The one I saw yesterday was Frank, but he wasn't the one.'

'Goodness gracious!' ejaculated Mrs.
Andrews, are the woods full of them?'

'No, dearie,' said Claire, calming her mother, 'there are but two of them, and they are twins. When the really and truly one came in from a business trip, and saw me at work in his uncle's office, I thought he would have a spasm. Somehow, I don't exactly know how,' and Claire's voice indicated a feeling not hitherto entering into the affair, 'I knew that it was not the other one, although they are the perfect image of each other. Watching him prevented my going into hysterics, I am sure,
for I didn't know what to do. But we preserved our discretion and Uncle George, I mean Mr. Burton, never once suspected that he stood on the very vortex of a seething romance. As soon as he had told this—uncle what had been done, the old gentleman introduced him to me, explaining who I was, and then what did he do but tell his uncle the story of our lives. Uncle George,
I mean Mr. Burton, thought it was too
jolly for anything, and began to tease me,
but I didn't care.'

'How did the young man explain not recognizing you in the car?'

'That was very easy; it was the other one all the time. This one lives in another direction.'

'Oh, indeed!'

'Yes, and this one has been watching me ever since he saved my life, and I didn't know anything about it, only there wasn't any twin to bother him. He had fully intended to drop into Uncle John's office and meet me by accident you know. He and Uncle John are very good friends. Now, mother dear, what do you think of it, and what have you to say?'

'My dear Claire,' she replied with more seriousness than she had yet manifested,
'it has been a very intangible, amusing kind of an affair until now, but it may be
—is he married?' she broke off suddenly.

'Not yet,' laughed Claire, emphasizing the last word.

'Following this report, Claire had less to say than formerly of her romance, and there was a serious side apparent now which had not previously appeared. She told her mother, at occasional intervals, of calls made by Mr. Morley at her uncle's office, and also of his walking part way
home with her on more than one occasion,

and of his request to call, and of her asking him to wait until she was sure she wanted him to come. Mrs. Andrews was annoyed at first by this very unconventional acquaintance, and then became alarmed.

'I must see John,' she said firmly enough now, 'and have him put a stop to those office visits, and you need not ask him to call until I am sure I want him to call.'

'Love laughs at John-Smiths as well as at locksmiths,' responded Claire, on the defensive, and her mother almost wept at this shadow of the first difference between them.

Why she should have felt such a prejudice against this young man she did not know, but it was firmly fixed, and she determined not to let the matter proceed further without her interference. Next morning while Claire was on her way down town, her mother telephoned to Mr. Smith that she would call at his office at two in the afternoon on business, requesting him
to say nothing to Claire about her coming.
Mr. Smith was disturbed; so disturbed in fact that he went directly to Claire to know what was the matter. Claire told him she hadn't the faintest idea. But Mrs. Andrews did not come. On the contrary, at three o'clock a telegram came from her to Claire and Mr. Smith to come to her as she had been hurt in an accident.

They hurried to the house to find that Mrs. Andrews had been knocked down on the street by a runaway, and had received numerous bruises and abrasions, and was severely shocked, but that her injuries were not serious. The physician in attendance said he had been called suddenly by a young man who, he was informed by a policeman, had saved the lady's life, but had modestly refused to give his name and had disappeared as soon as he had put the lady in the physician's care. By eight o'clock in the evening Mrs. Andrews was quite able to talk.

'I have a romance myself, now, Claire,'
she said, making a sorry figure of her patched face, trying to laugh, 'and a nice young man really saved my life. If he had not come to the rescue I never would have got out of the way.'

'We'll be married on the very same day, Precious,' crooned Claire, bending over the patient, quite forgetful of everything else in her joy over the safety of her mother.

'No, we won't,' dissented Mrs. Andrews, vigorously enough for one in her condition.
'Once is enough for me. You may do all the marrying for this family.'

Claire laughed. 'Who was the young man?' she asked with all feminine curiosity.

'I only wish I knew. He took my name and address and brought me home in a cab.
Then he vanished.'

'In a cab, you poor dear?' exclaimed Claire, indignantly. 'Why didn't he get a carriage or something comfortable?'

'It was only a short distance, and he took the first thing he could find. Don't blame my young man,' smiled Mrs. Andrews, 'he saved my life and got me home
while some men would have been thinking about it.'

'Thank heaven, you're saved,' responded Claire fervently.

They talked as long as the nurse thought good for Mrs. Andrews, and Claire retired to her own room adjoining her mother's.
She did not go to the office next morning,
and at ten o'clock a messenger came with a note to her from Alfred Morley, asking how her mother was and saying it had been his good fortune to have rendered her some service at the time of the accident the day before. He suggested that perhaps it would be just as well not to mention his name to her mother until later.
She wrote to Morley at once, telling him
to come up that afternoon and be formally presented. He came promptly, but after a conference it was decided that he should be known to Mrs. Andrews as Charles

Archer, a nephew of that Archer who had once courted Clara Smith, now Mrs. Andrews. Mrs. Andrews was able to see her rescuer for a few minutes, and she was grateful indeed to him. She was even more so when she learned who he was, and insisted that he must come again, and, as soon as she had sufficiently recovered, he must dine with them. Mr. Archer readily promised everything asked of him, and for the next five or six days he and a box of flowers appeared regularly at the Andrews home. Mrs. Andrews was old enough to be the young man's mother, but she thought his attentions were too much more praiseworthy, and she talked about him to Claire until that young woman actually blushed.

'I don't like your Mr. Morley,' Mrs.
Andrews said to her daughter one day,
'and I hope you will forget the foolish romance you had begun, when to save you,
I came so near losing my own life. Indeed, would have lost it if it had not been for
Mr. Archer. Now, Claire, dear,' continued
Mrs. Andrews beseechingly, 'why don't you like him? Why don't you build your romance about such a brave and handsome young man as Charles is?'

'Charles?' repeated Claire with a half smile.

'That is what I used to call his father,'
said Mrs. Andrews tenderly.

'But Mr. Morley saved my life,' contended Claire.

'Yes, by asking you to go across the street. He never did what Charles Archer
did. Why, he risked his life to save mine.
Your Mr. Morley cannot possibly be as nice as my—as Charles Archer is.'

'You never saw Mr. Morley, mother.'

'No, and I don't want to, and I hope I never shall. From the very beginning of your romance, as you call it, I have been haunted by a presentiment that only unhappiness can come to you through that man; and you know, Claire, that I am not superstitious, or given to false alarms.
He has made me very, very unhappy.'

Claire, though I have never told you until now.'

Claire put her handkerchief to her eyes,
and stepping to the window, looked out for a full minute. When she turned to her mother again there was no sign of the struggle through which she had passed.

'Mother,' she said as if ready for the crucial test, 'if you will let me have Mr.
Morley to dinner the same day you have
Mr. Archer, you may compare them, and decide which shall be the one. As you decide, I will abide.'

'You are a dear, good girl Claire,' said Mrs. Andrews with tears in her eyes, 'and they shall come to-morrow evening.'

'Mrs. Andrews asked Mr. Archer that afternoon, and Claire was not a great while in announcing an acceptance from Mr. Morley, so Mrs. Andrews waited, with no little trepidation, this trial at which she was to act as the final arbiter.

At seven o'clock Mr. Archer arrived, and Mrs. Andrews met him with her most winning smile. Ten minutes later, as Claire happened to be passing through the hall on her way to the drawing-room—Mrs. Andrews loved to call it so, though it was not much larger than a band-box—the maid opened the front door.

'Oh, Mr. Morley, good evening,' her mother distinctly heard her say, but she could not hear Mr. Morley's response.

A moment later Claire called to Mr.
Archer to come to her, and Mr. Archer went promptly, for, as Mrs. Andrews was pleased to observe, Mr. Archer was always most happy to do anything Claire asked him to do. Mrs. Andrews sighed a little as she thought of this, but she had so me hope. Presently Claire and Mr. Archer returned.

'Where is Mr. Morley?' inquired Mrs.
Andrews, who had steeled herself to meet
this man of all men she most disliked.

'This is Mr. Morley,' said Claire presenting Mr. Archer.

'O—oh,' stammered Mrs. Andrews, 'I thought—'

'And both of us knew,' chorused Claire
and the young man, interrupting her effectually.

THE END.

DO NOT NEGLECT THE LITTLE ILLS OF TO-DAY.

The Use of PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

Will Eradicate From The Blood and System The Seeds of Disease

As grains of sands make our lofty mountains, drops of water the mighty ocean, and as our massive building areas made of one brick piled upon another; so do the little ills of life contribute to the building up of deadly diseases in the body.

Experienced medical men claim that fully three-fourths of our men and women
enter the summer seasons with little ills
and symptoms of disease, which must develop into serious and fatal troubles if not banished at once.

We hear our friends complaining daily
of rheumatic tendencies, sharp and darting neuralgic pains, dyspepsia, pains in the side and back, nervousness and sleeplessness; and we see with our own eyes the effects of impure blood in facial blotches, eruptions and sores. The little ills and pains of today build up the ailments and fatal diseases that follow days and weeks of neglect.

Wise and intelligent people who have looked into the claims of Paine's Celery Compound and followed its remarkable cures of relatives, friends and neighbors,
use it themselves with faith and confidence,
to banish their symptoms of coming troubles, to cleanse the blood, to reestablish
nerve force, energy and bodily strength,
so that they will be in condition to withstand the enervating effects of the coming hot weather.

In every community where Paine's Celery Compound has been used at this season
to banish disease, it is regarded as a godsend. Workers in offices, shops, factories, and weary and rundown wives and mothers
in their homes have thanked Heaven for Dr. Phelps' marvelous prescription, because it made them well. Try a bottle or two, ye who are ailing and sick; it will give you what you most stand in need of —health and new life.

What a Revolution shoe making has seen—many of us have seen the Revolution too—and can remember when the only source of shoe supply was the custom shoe shop, when the only difference between your old shoes and your new shoes would be that one pair would be new. It made no difference if 4 was too small and 5 too large—take them or leave them. What a change to-day. What a difference between the "old timers" and "Sovereign" Shoes. Sovereign Shoes being made from the finest chrome tanned, calf—from kid with glove like texture or patent leathers of Regal design. In 15 different shapes, half sizes in each, 3 different widths in each half size. For Ladies and Gents price $3.00, $4.00, $5.00. Price always stamped on the sole.

PAGE WIRE FENCE. This is the Page Standard II Bar Fence, made of "Page" wire which is twice as strong as common wire. The continuous coil, note wavy appearance, allows for expansion and contraction which is important owing to Canadian climate. Our upright wires are in one piece and have strength of about 500 pounds. If made of pieces spliced at each horizontal, they would have a strength of only about 300 pounds. We also make gates, ornamental fences, poultry netting, nails and staples. There is what is called the worldly spirit which enters with the greatest subtlety into the character of even good people; and there is what is called the time-spirit, which means the dominant way of thinking and of acting which prevails in the age in which we live; and these are powerful temptations, full of danger and in perpetual action upon us.—CARDINAL MANNING

THURSDAY, MAY 29.

THE CATHOLIC NAME IN PARLIAMENT.

A Bill "to incorporate the Bishop of the Orthodox Russo-Greek Catholic Church" in Canada was discussed the week before last in the House of Commons. Mr. Lariviere of Provencher objected to the legal title thus conferred upon the proposed corporation, because it contained the word Catholic. He showed that the catechism of the Greek church did not use the word, and that the legal title given that Church at Washington and in the State of California did not include the word Catholic. It thus became necessary for the Members to say by their votes whether they thought that people and churches could rightly claim to be called Catholic after separation from the Catholic Church.

It is only natural that Protestants should think such a question a mere matter of words. Their conception of the duty of unity in religion is too vague for practical purposes. But the Catholics who voted with the majority should have known better than to attempt to revise the Apostles' Creed. In the creed we declare our belief in one Catholic Church. Now we are asked to believe that there are several Catholic Churches. The Hon. Mr. Tarte said:

"Let them call themselves what they like. What difference does it make to us?"

Let us suppose a somewhat parallel case. Many farmers are passing from the Dakotas into Canada and becoming Canadians. If these persisted in calling themselves United States citizens after becoming Canadians, we could doubtless afford to smile at their peculiarity. But if the Catholic Bishops in council adopted a measure of practical importance implying that those Canadians had a perfect right to call themselves United States citizens, and if one of the Bishops attempted to justify that measure by saying that it did not matter to them what those people called themselves, would not politicians and other patriots feel and say that the Church was going beyond the bounds of ecclesiastical jurisdiction? It would be considered a serious matter for the Church to thus mix up the terms of allegiance and cause confusion in our ideas of loyalty. Also to the Catholic Church it is a matter of real importance to have her title unclouded in the minds of the many. When the Dominion Parliament decides that she must share her name with other bodies, it goes beyond the bounds of civil rights. To Catholics at least this should be a matter of conscience. Those who have to do with converts to the Catholic Church know that in thousands of cases the first seeds of conversion are sown in childhood by repetition of the Apostles' Creed. Protestant children ten or twelve years old say in their daily prayers: "I believe in the Holy Ghost, the holy Catholic Church." Then they often reflect and think: "Why, the Catholics must be right after all." Some of our Catholic M. P.'s, would say to them: "You little fools, what does it matter what people call themselves?" To the world it is foolishness. In reality, it is the grace of faith. In any case it is extremely sad to see men of position treat lightly the sacred heritage of the Catholic Name.

A LAST WORD.

Says the Messenger and Visitor:

THE CASKET contends that logically they [the words of the correspondent] must mean what it charged, inasmuch as they are used to encourage a mission of a general character to Roman Catholics, and that it must be impossible for Baptists to distinguish among Roman Catholics as to who are and who are not in a state of salvation. THE CASKET is doubtless astute enough to perceive that in taking such a position it is venturing on very thin ice. If the Apostles had proceeded upon such ground as that Christianity could have had no message for the Jews, for how could it be presumed that the Jews as such were without any saving knowledge of truth?

Our esteemed contemporary must be in desperate straits when it grasps at such a poor straw as this. There is absolutely no parity between the two cases. Catholic bishops and priests have at least as good a right to put it on the lowest ground, and are as well fitted, to preach the Gospel of Christ as any Baptist minister. And they should be better fitted than outsiders to lead back to Christ the members of their own flocks that stray from the path of salvation. Our contemporary assumes that Baptist missionaries are to Catholics what the Apostles were to the Jews. Here, indeed, is assumption. It must be admitted that the Baptist body, for so insignificant an entity, has a conceit of itself that is colossal.

"How," asks the Messenger and Visitor, "could it be presumed that the Jews as such were without any saving knowledge of truth?" And the man who asks this question is one of the lights of the Baptist body—one of those "flaming torches" that Baptists have in readiness to guide us benighted Catholics into the path of salvation! The Jews as such we take to be men of the Hebrew race who did not believe that Jesus of Nazareth was the Son of God. Those of them that believed Jesus to be God were Jews no longer, but Christians. To each one of the Jews, therefore, not less than to the Gentiles who knew not the one true God, these words of our Lord were strictly applicable: "He who believes and is baptised, shall be saved; he who believes not, shall be condemned." Surely here is something more than presumption that the Jews as such were without any knowledge of saving truth seeing that a vague belief in a promised Messiah ceased to be saving truth after Jesus of Nazareth died for sinners and rose again from the dead. "How could it be presumed that the Jews as such were without any saving knowledge of the truth?" To the Bible Christian who puts such a query we make answer, as our Lord did to men who also knew the letter of Scripture and prided themselves on their knowledge of it, Is it not for this cause that ye err, that ye know not the Scriptures?

These are the closing words of our contemporary:

We do not know just what would satisfy our esteemed contemporary in this matter, but it would seem to be this,—that Baptists as well as other Protestants, should recognize Roman Catholics, "by virtue of their being such," as being in a condition of salvation, and their religious teachers, by virtue of their being such, as "instructors of the foolish and teachers of babes," in respect to all the peoples of the world, so that while it is an insufferable impertinence for a Baptist or other Protestant to institute a mission for the benefit of Roman Catholics, it is most proper and praiseworthy for Roman Catholics to carry on missions for the conversion of Protestants. Is that it?

No that is not "it" at all. That is what we have once already called, and must once more call, evasion or shuffling. It is a side-issue, with which, as we have already declared, we are quite ready to deal in its own turn. We are not now concerned to justify Catholic missions to non-Catholics. We have asked our contemporary to show how the words of its contributor, in describing the work of the Grand Ligne Mission, were compatible with a belief on the part of Baptists that Catholics as such can see salvation. This is the real issue. Our contemporary, in order to evade it, has run on to a siding. We are still on the main track, and propose to stay there.

A TEST CASE.

And whilst they were at supper, Jesus took bread, and blessed, and broke, and gave to his disciples, and said: Take ye and eat; this is My Body. And taking the chalice, He gave thanks, and gave to them, saying: drink ye all of this. For this is My Blood of the New Testament which shall be shed for many unto the forgiveness of sins.—Matt. 26. 26-28.

He Himself, therefore, having declared, and said concerning the bread, This is My Body, who shall dare to doubt henceforward? And He Himself having settled, and said, This is My Blood, who shall ever doubt, saying, This is not His Blood. He once, at Cana of Galilee, turned water into wine, which is akin to blood, and is He undeserving of belief when He turned wine into blood?—St. Cyril of Jerusalem (fourth century).

Not for many a long century after St. Cyril's day did any one dare to deny that the Holy Eucharist is the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ. When men arose in the after time who denied this, they built their denial on the alleged right of each individual to interpret Holy Scripture for himself. Now, affirmation and denial of one and the same thing, being contradictory, cannot both be true. The words of our Lord are to be understood in their literal and obvious meaning, or in a figurative sense. Taken in a literal sense they imply the Real Presence; taken in a figurative sense, if they are capable of being so taken, they exclude it. Suppose now, for the sake of argument, that private interpretation of Scripture is a God-given right. St. Cyril used that right to affirm the change of bread into the Body of Christ; Calvin used the same right to deny this same doctrine. If the one is true, the other is false, and yet God gives His sanction to the false as well as to the true, since all that one does in the exercise of a God-given right must needs carry divine sanction. Moreover, the Son of God, who for this was born, and for this came into the world, that He should give testimony to the truth (John 28, 37), has left men after all in the impossibility of finding out what the truth is. If these consequences are absurd; if they are even blasphemous; then absurd and blasphemous also is the assumption that leads to them by the inexorable law of logical necessity.

Boston Notes.

Catholic Union Hall, Boston, was a veritable bower of beauty on last evening—Thursday, May 22nd—when the Ladies Auxiliary of the Maritime Provincial Club elected to hold their second annual May party. While the number present seemed smaller than that of a year ago, yet the affair was as successful—if not more so—than its predecessor. To the writer, it was certainly pleasurable to again mingle in the delightful society of friends and acquaintances from the land and home of cheer and kindness.

Miss Catherine Chisholm and Miss Sarah D. MacDonald have enjoyed a well-earned rest at the Hillhurst, Billerica, Mass.

Mr. A. C. Chisholm, the well-known builder, has had an attack of la grippe which confined him to the house for a short time. He is again, we are glad to state, able to be about to attend to his many interests.

On Monday afternoon, May 12, the harbor police found the body of John McEachern, a longshoreman, who was drowned on March 17 while at work on a dredger. The unfortunate man hailed from Port Hawkesbury, C. B.

The date of Coronation Day has been changed from June 17 to 26, as the former date conflicted with the celebration of Bunker Hill Day.

Much sympathy is felt for Mr. Michael Heenan, the recording secretary of the Maritime Provincial Club, who has sustained the loss of his estimable wife by death on last Friday, 16th. Mr. Heenan accompanied his wife's remains to Halifax, N. S., where interment took place.

Mrs. Angus Smith, nee McDonald, died at her home at Roxbury, Tuesday, 20th, leaving a husband and two children to whom the sincere sympathy of all is extended. The burial took place to-day—Friday—at St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury, preceded by High Mass at St. Joseph's Church.

This has been the warmest May 23rd hereabouts, but one, in thirty years. It was 86° in the shade this afternoon.

TRANSPLANTED.

Cape Breton News.

The directors of the Dominion Iron and Steel and Dominion Coal companies met on 23rd inst. and finally fixed the term of the lease of the latter Company to the former under an eight per cent guarantee dividend, which the Steel Company will pay on the Coal Company's stock. The royalty which the Steel Company is to pay on a production of over 3,500,000 tons annually is reduced from 15 cents to 7½ cents per ton, representing an annual saving to the Steel Company, when the proposed development is completed, of from $75,000 to $100,000 annually, and the company is released from an obligation to deposit $600,000 as a guarantee, and also of the payment of $2,000,000 of the Coal Company's liabilities, by taking over all the assets of the Coal Company instead of only a portion. These assets will be sufficient to more than liquidate the indebtedness, and will leave a surplus which is to be applied to development of the coal company's properties. The lease will be submitted to the shareholders of both companies on June 12th.

Messrs. Pottinger, Russell, Tiffin, Campbell and other officials of the I. C. R., have been in C. B. on a tour of inspection over the road. Mr. Pottinger said that a number of improvements would be undertaken at the Sydney machine shop, and it will be enlarged and put in such condition that all repair work of the Cape Breton division will be done there. The new depot is to be on Ferry street, and will be one of the largest and most up-to-date in the lower provinces. The officials visited North Sydney to make arrangements for commencing the work of extending the terminus wharf there.

There is considerable anxiety in Cape Breton concerning the Crows Nest Pass disaster, as many from Cape Breton are working in that vicinity.

The trial of conductor James Craigie, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Capt. Angus Stewart, of St. Peter's, is going on at Arichat, and will likely conclude to-day. G. W. Kyte, of St. Peter's, is appearing for the Crown, and D. A. Hearn and Duncan Finlayson for the defence.

War News.

Peace has not yet been achieved. The British Cabinet, it is understood, had several meetings this week considering the question. Their decision is to be submitted to the Boer leaders, who will in turn refer the result to the burghers in the field. The optimistic feeling lately prevailing in London on the early conclusion of the war is not now so general. The frequent conferences of the cabinet without definite result causes rumours to circulate that a hitch has occurred. There is, however, a general longing in official circles in Great Britain for peace, which may result in a treaty being concluded by which the Boers may receive such terms as will induce them to recognize Britain's supremacy in major affairs in the government of South Africa. Great hopes are based on Lord Kitchener, who is credited with being a capable diplomat as well as a brilliant soldier. He is known to possess tact, shrewdness and good sense, and it is felt if the cabinet will follow his advice peace will be secured.

In the list of three names submitted by the irremovable rectors of the archdiocese of New York to the Holy See for choice of a successor to the late Archbishop Corrigan, the Right Rev. Mgr. Farley, Auxiliary Bishop of New York, stands first, the Right Rev. Bishop MacDonnell, of Brooklyn, second, and the Right Rev. Mgr. Mooney, former Vicar-General of New York, third. The selection made by the suffragan Bishops of the See of New York has not yet transpired.

The general elections in the Province of Ontario are being held to-day. A vigorous contest is being waged by both political parties. Only one candidate—a conservative—was elected by acclamation.

General News.

Ex-Mayor James T. Hamilton, of Halifax, died on the 23rd inst. Coal went up 50 cents a ton in Toronto last week. A severe snowstorm raged at St. John's, Newfoundland, on 21st inst. Disastrous forest fires are reported in New Brunswick. Anthracite coal was sold as high as $8.00 a ton last week in New York at retail. Another eruption from Mont Pelee has heaped fresh volcanic matter upon the ruins of St. Pierre, Martinique. In the great coal mine disaster at Frater-ville, Tennessee, last week, it is now thought 226 lives were lost. Merchants of Jamaica are considering the question of better freightrates etc., looking to increased trade with Canada. 14 ships were lost at St. Pierre in the volcanic disturbances, valued with their cargoes at $491,000.00. A new coal pier was commenced at Port Hastings, C. B., on Thursday last by the Inverness Coal & Railway Co. John T. Larkin, engineer of the Govern-ment steamer Lily, dropped dead at Halifax, Tuesday night. A negro named Morgan was burned at the stake near Lansing, Texas, on 22nd inst. for assault on a white woman. The execution was accomplished with peculiarly horrible barbarity. The city council of Hartford, Conn., has refused to appropriate any money for an Independence Day celebration this year, because a fatal accident occurred during the fourth of July festivities in 1901. In the Admiralty Court at Halifax on the 21st inst., Chief Justice McDonald awarded the crew of the Karlshue $75,000 for their services in saving the steamer Neckar a short time ago. Bands of insurgents who had been scattered by the Chinese troops in the southern part of Chi Li province, attacked the Hankau-Pekin railroad and burned a bridge and much material. Is a mutiny at the Stark County work-house, Ohio, on the 21st inst., George Jacobs was killed and George Homerstone was dangerously shot. A prisoner named Gigant did the shooting. It developed that there was a general mutiny among the pris-oners. The city of Quezaltenango, in Guatemala, South America, was destroyed by an earth-quake in three quarters of a minute on or about the 23rd inst. A great part of the coffee crop in Guatemala has been de-stroyed. The city had a population of 25,000. The number of lives lost is not stated. There are said to be 20,000 women teach-ing school in the United States; 10,000 are writing for a living; 1,800 women are preaching; 6,000 are practicing medicine, and some 14,000 are engaged in art and decorative work. The whole army of woman workers in the United States is es-timated at 6,000,000. Few people have even yet a clear idea of the magnitude of the British import egg trade. In 1900 Britain imported 168,000,000 dozen eggs, and last year 170,000,000. This figures out a total of 2,040,000,000 eggs, or 5,689,041 eggs per day. This number, be it remembered represents im-ported eggs alone, and is over and above the home supply. It is reported that the American mine owners and railroads have assumed an atti-tude of "no surrender" with respect to the great anthracite coal strike and that they are confident of winning. It is said that the supply of anthracite available for Am-erican consumption is only large enough to last ten days. An impressive feature of the American miners' strike was the action of the mem-bers of St. Gabriel's parish in taking a pledge to abstain from the use of intoxicat-ing liquors during the period of the strike. St. Gabriel's church is the one of which the late Rev. E. S. Phelps, the min-ers' champion in the strike of 1900, was the rector. The tax on grain has proved so unpopu-lar throughout Great Britain, and has had such an unexpected effect in reuniting the liberal party that there is little doubt the government will drop it. The belief that the government intends to drop the tax is so strong that all members of the house of commons who have leanings towards pro-tection, met informally Monday and sent an appeal to the ministers to dispense with the tax. About two weeks ago a double funeral took place in Truro, when the remains of Miss Murray, daughter of Angus Murray of that town, were buried, and at the same time the body of a man supposed to be that of her brother Harry, were interred. It was a case of mistaken identity as re-gards the brother for Harry Murray is still living and the body that lies in the cemetery there under his name is that of one who is quite unknown. Politicians are already speculating con-cerning M. Waldeck-Rousseau's successor as Premier of France and opinion is divid-ed between the chances of Henri Brisson and Leon Bourgeois, who have both in the past filled the post of prime minister. Some people regard M. Delcasse, the present minister of foreign affairs, as the com-ing man and as having derived a great in-crease in prestige from his present jour-ney to St. Petersburg with the president. New Glasgow, is in a state of excitement over the alleged kidnapping of a child at Little Harbor. The story goes that a stranger entered the house of Mrs. Fraser, who was alone with her two children, one only six weeks old, the other three years. When the stranger entered, the latter went into a room and shut the door after her. The mother went in to take it out, and during that time the infant was taken away by the stranger; scores of neighbors formed a search party, which was sug-gested by the police from Plotou and New Glasgow, assisted by local citizens. No trace has yet been found of the kid-napper.

The Laurentian sanitarium, at Ste. Agatha, Que., was burned to the ground on 21st inst., and it is believed one of the seventeen patients, Mrs. Goddard, of Gran-by, who is reported missing, lost her life in the flames. Others escaped in their night clothes. No one knows just how the fire originated. The inmates were hurriedly awakened shortly after two o'clock by Dr. Ferguson, one of the assistants at the institute, and they were immediately taken to the town. As all the patients are af-flicted with tuberculosis and other lung troubles it is feared that because of this exposure in the night air for over half an hour, it will have serious effect. A terrible explosion in a coal mine at Crow's Nest Pass, near Fernie, B. C., on last Thursday night, has caused great loss of life. It is estimated that 150 persons have perished. Already 80 bodies have been recovered. There were forty Nova Scotians working at Crow's Nest and six-teen are known to be among the dead. They belong, as far as known up to the present, to Springfield, Stellarton, West-ville, and C. B. Co. mining districts. The disaster has caused great distress in a large number of families, and the authorities of Fernie have appealed for aid. The Dom-inion Coal Co. has forwarded $500, and the Town of Sydney has voted $500.

Town Council.

A meeting of the Council was held Tues-day evening. The resignation of John H. McInnis, policeman, to take effect end of May, was read and accepted. Alexander D. McDonald, ex-policeman, and Walter Grant made application for the position. The former was appointed. His engagement is by the month, and the salary is to be the same as his predecessor, $30 per month. Miss Mary McDonald was granted $10 for the use of a barn for a pound from May 1st to November 1st. An account from W. J. Landry, for ten thousand feet of hemlock plank at $8.75 per M, was ordered to be paid. Bills for coal for poor and Town office from M. L. Cunningham were passed. A couple of poor cases were attended to.

Personals.

Miss Sophie Cook of Bayfield, Ant., was a graduate of the Commercial department at Mount Allison College this week. George F. A. McDougall, of New Dor-chester, Mass., and F. E. Sangeleer, of East Boston, were in Town last week, making a tour of Eastern Nova Scotia. Mr. Milledge Randall, his wife and two daughters of Riverside, California, arrived in Antigonish on last Friday on a visit. Mr. Randall is an uncle of F. A. Randall of Antigonish. He left here some eighteen years ago, and is now a successful Cali-fornia fruit grower. A. A. MacIntyre, barrister, Sydney, Thomas Phalen, law student, North Syd-ney, Alfred Carrol, mason, Sydney, and John MacIsaac, manager of the Royal Bank, Port Hawkesbury, were in Town over Sunday. Mr. Alex. Baillie, of Port Hastings, the general agent in Cape Breton of the Mut-ual Life of Canada Insurance Co., was in Town on Tuesday. His company is ac-quiring a good business throughout Canada and especially in Mr. Baillie's territory. Thomas A. Bates, of Boston, the late Secretary of the Royal Oak Mining Co., was in town for a few days. He came in the interest of New England capitalists to look over the large iron deposits at Mal-lignant Cove. Mr. Bates reports that our well known young townsman Mr. Arthur Copeland, who has been in Boston for almost a year as the Treasurer of the Royal Oak Mining Company, is thinking of visiting the home folks of Antigonish the coming summer. Mr. Copeland's pro-tracted stay in Boston has worked a ma-terial benefit in his health. Kenneth J. McLeod, of Richmond, Nova Scotia, and Duncan MacKenzie of Loch-carroll, Scotland, who have been in the employ of the Camp Bird Mining Co., of Ouray, Colorado, left for South Africa on the 11th inst., where they will take respon-sible positions as mining superintendents in Johannesburg. Among their friends present when leaving were Wm. Beaton, Man-ager of the Camp Bird Mines; M. C. With-erspoon, James Stuart, Dan C. MacKin-non, James Coles, D. A. and John Fer-guson, Mrs. Wm. Douglas, and Miss Alice and Catherine Beaton.—Denver Times.

At first sight it may seem strange to us that an Irish bishop should be even thought of as the next Archbishop of Glasgow. But it must be remembered that there are to-day more Irishmen in Glasgow than in Dublin.

DEATHS

Obituary and marriage notices have been gradually encroaching on our space. The at-tention of our publishing company being called to the matter at the annual meeting, it was decided to limit the space for these notices, except where the event appears to be of gen-eral interest. The best way to mark this limit seems to be to adopt the plan employed by many other papers: Notices of deaths will be published free of charge when not exceeding 40 words. For every word over 40, 2 cents will be charged, payment in advance. At Trenton, May 23rd, after a short illness STELLA JANE LEWIS, dearly beloved child of WILLIAM and CATHERINE LEWIS, aged 2 years and 7 months. At Beech Hill, on Thursday, May 15, ASBURN CHISHOLM, aged 30 years, son of William Chisholm. He deceased was a young man of excel-lent qualities, sober, industrious and much es-teemed by all his acquaintances. Much sym-athy is felt for his parents, brothers and sis-ters. May he rest in peace! Monday, the 19th instant, saw the death of one of Broad Cove's brightest sons, in the person of JOHN JAMES, beloved son of JOHN McLEOD of that place. The deceased was a youth of 15 years, of pure and spotless character, of uncommon abilities and remarkable good sense. Though young he claimed from all that knew him their respect and admiration. Death came after a lingering illness, borne with saint-like resignation. A dutiful father, a loving mother, and several saddened brothers and sisters mourn the loss of a much loved son and brother. Archbishop Corrigan's Funeral.

(Julian Hawthorne in the New York Journal of May 10.)

Dead on his bier lay the body of Michael Corrigan, a good man, a zealous priest, an Archbishop of the Catholic Church.

The dead man was clad in his priestly vestments—the princely purple, the high white mitre; the bier was richly draped; around it burned a score of candles, shining in the transparent gloom of the great cathedral like flowers of soft fire.

He lay before the holy altar; upward on every side rose the silent rush of the fluted columns, draped to the carved capitals in black; higher still was the delicate tracery of the airy galleries; above them the broad windows glowing with sacred scenes pictured in stained glass; and, surmounting all, the fretted design of the arched roof.

The altar which rose behind him as he lay was rich with harmonious decoration and twinkling with lights; and all the elaborate splendor was strikingly contrasted with the cold pallor of the inclosing walls of the edifice.

It was, in its entirety, a solemn and glorious spectacle, well calculated to stir the most sluggish emotions. But the eminent priest lay quiet on his bier, unaffected by what moved all the living; for he was dead; his race was run and his work performed.

The Church was filled to the walls with spectators, from whom arose a subdued sound of reverent talk and comment. Many of them had come from afar; they were old people and young, men and women (but women chiefly) rich and poor (but chiefly, it seemed, poor); Catholics and Protestants. Nor was the Hebrew race unrepresented; in a pew on the central aisle sat the Rabbi Gottheil, silent and absorbed. The civilized world is divided now, as it was in the beginning, between the Jews—the democrats—and the imperial Church of Christ.

MIGHTIEST OF HUMAN ORGANIZATIONS.

The essence of what the one believes, the other, now as always, denies. But in these days, though the academic differences persist, the odium theologicum is subdued, and men of varying or hostile creeds meet as men and friends; the stoning of infidels and the inquisition on the heretics are no more.

The Church of Rome is the mightiest of all human organizations; it is substantial and perfect down to its last detail. From the central Christ of the creed, down through the Roman pontiff, and so on, branching and disseminating from the red-capped cardinal to the humblest black-cassocked priest, the august and absolute spiritual authority is passed along, and exercised and obeyed.

Every phrase used by the fathers in their speech with the faithful, in their prayers and addresses, in their ritual for every human and divine occasion, has been repeated since the earliest days of the Church; there is an endless vista of history and tradition behind them, giving them an awful weight and sanctity of influence and obligation; they possess something akin to a magical power; they are the refined and crystallized essence of the will of the Most High; the spiritual spontaneity which we cultivate in the dissenting churches is not countenanced in the ancient Church of Christ; in that Church, what has been, ever shall be, world without end.

After the hour at which the procession of priests was scheduled to appear there was a long interval of waiting, borne by the vast crowd in the pews more or less patiently; at times the organ sent forth its rolling melodies; candles burned; the sunlight fell through the tinted windows; the ushers moved on tiptoe to and fro; the closing of a pew door resounded through the hollow edifice.

The audience watched and waited, and the dead Archbishop also waited; all save waiting was over for him in this world, and there was no symptom of impatience from him. His hands that clasped the crucifix did not tremble; the expression on the sunken gray features did not change. Rigid and immovable he lay, waiting for what was to come; for the Day of Judgment and the last sound of the angelic trumpets.

THE AWFUL MAJESTY OF DEATH.

To-day and to-morrow would pass away, and years would follow years, and the Archbishop would never stir hand or foot, or draw a laboring breath. He had entered into his rest, and none could disturb him again. He lay clad in his priestly garments in the awful majesty of death.

At last, the wide doors in the front of the Church were noiselessly thrown open and the blank, white daylight streamed in upon the columned obscurity. Thousands of heads were turned, and gradually the entire mass of human beings rose in their seats and looked toward the west.

The procession was about to enter. Slowly and with dignity they came, pacing two and two down the central aisle. Scores upon scores they passed, hundreds treading in the steps of hundreds; they walked with heads bowed and hands folded, the priestly dignitaries of the Church in their official vestments. Some wore on their shoulders capes or jackets of white muslin and lace, others were clad in the severe garb of the monks; others appeared in plain black; still others, as the long file continued, showed the richer garments of the higher ecclesiastical orders.

Slowly and interminably they marched, defiling and deploying, passing up and onward until they were silently absorbed in the great space before the altar, behind and around the high bier with its august occupant. And still others came and others, till the broad aisle was filled and the marchers paused and seated themselves, each man on the folding chair which had been provided for him.

SOLDIERS OF THE CROSS.

It was a marvellous sight to see the profile of these priestly heads passing successively one after another, bowed and serious. Endless was the variety of types; inexhaustible the diversity of character; they were old and young, high and low, noble and plain, dignified and awkward, stern and mild, humble and proud, strong and weak; none was like another in all that multitude; add yet all had in common one look—the look of the Catholic priest—the look of mingled authority and obedience.

There is no other look that could be mistaken for it in the tribe of mortal men; it told of such training and discipline as no other men are called on to sustain. It was the look worn by those who spread the doctrines of the Church over the face of the earth; who worked and suffered and died to have souls in the primeval wilderness; who have built up in their fellow-men this mighty fact of the Catholic Church. It allied them one with another and brought them into unity, one stupendous organism, the body of Christ.

They constitute one of the greatest forces ever created on earth; quiet, subtle, omnipresent, well nigh irresistible. Behind them lies a history of deeds unparalleled. And after two thousand years they seem as strong, as compact and purposeful as in the days of the early fathers.

These are the men who overthrew paganism, who rule today the larger part of the Christian world. From them emanated the holy army of martyrs and the company of the saints; from their ranks were chosen the Popes who governed Europe and turned the tides of history. Their outward temporal power is no longer what it was; but the power of no temporal monarch equals theirs.

Authority and obedience mingle in their aspect; these are the virtues to which the world succumbs. Each as he passed the bier cast a glance upon him who lay there; but he gave no answering look. He had looked his last in the face of man; he was now facing a Countenance not mortal nor infinite. He was dead, and immortally wedded henceforth to interests beyond the grave.

THE HIGHEST CEREMONY.

The long procession was stayed at last, and then ensued another interval, followed by the entrance of the Cardinal, who was to celebrate the Requiem Mass. He came walking with feeble steps amidst the company of his brethren; on his head was the crimson beretta and he wore the red robes of his princely rank. His face was turned earthward; it was a worn and ascetic visage, scholarly and gentle.

Cardinal Gibbons is an older man than his fellow priest who lay on the bier; but he still lived and the other had passed on to a life whereof the Cardinal knew nothing.

He, too, lifted his face as he went by the rigid figure outstretched yonder, and he bowed himself again in reverence to death. There came no sneaking obeisance; priestly rank had no further concern with Archbishop Corrigan, and had the Pope of Rome done homage to him he would have been met with the same silent and appalling indifference.

There is no respect of persons with God, and the Archbishop had been invested with a democratic dignity surpassing any that mortal authority can bestow. To death must we all come at last, and in the dust be equal made, and that equality is greater and more impressive than any nobility or royalty of living men. It endures forever.

Now preparation was made for the Mass for the Dead. Forgive thy servant, O Almighty One, for his sins; raise him up from the grave as Thy beloved Son was raised up! The organ pours forth its sublime notes and voices rise in music, praising and beseeching the Lord. At the high altar priest and acolyte perform their homage and deliver their ritual.

SYMINGTON'S EDINBURGH COFFEE ESSENCE

makes delicious coffee in a moment. No trouble, no waste. In small and large bottles, from all Grocers.

GUARANTEED PURE.

The candles shine in the holy dusk, the vestments gleam, there are bowings and protestations, the plaintive voices of the worshippers implore the Unseen Power, the sweet, faint notes of bells sound from sacred recesses, the censers swing and the delicate precious perfume floats through the still air and dims with its light haze the adoring figures and the shrine at which they kneel.

Nothing do e by man is more subtly moving in its influence than the Mass; no other dramatic representation approaches it in significance and sublimity. It is the most wonderful and cogent appeal ever devised by humanity for the blessing and presence of its Creator.

After the plaintive implorings come a hush. We seem to be looking far into the heart of a holiness and mystery too profound for speech or thought. Has the Most High indeed deigned to come down to us? Are we standing in that ineffable Presence? The silence sings in the waiting ear; then, of a sudden, with a glorious rush of sound, comes the organ thunder and the outburst of triumphant voices, shaking and overpowering the soul.

The Lord is with us; blessed be the name of the Lord! Who can withstand that marvellous outburst? What heart but must leap up and acknowledge that triumph? The audience vibrates with emotion; the priests avow their spiritual ecstasy; the atmosphere rocks with the storm of the acclaim; there is only one who remains unresponsive. That stern, meek figure on the bier is deaf even to this supreme appeal. His heart gives not a throb; his ears are deaf; he is dead in the midst of all this life and passion and uplifting of the soul.

Or is he wrapped in a music compared with which this is but a discordant murmur? Do his closed eyes behold glories with which these are but dust and ashes? We cannot reach him; we cannot move him. What do we here in our darkness and impotence, thinking to honor him who is beyond all human honors?

The holy thunders of the Mass die away and are stilled, and the Archbishop rests as before, inaccessible on his terrible throne.

Yet it was a spectacle and a ceremony well worth seeing, and to be taken deeply to heart.

Horse Breeding as a Source of Income.

(From the Maritime Farmer.)

In approaching the farmers of New Brunswick on the subject of horse-breeding for profit, it is, I presume, necessary that the following important points should be taken into consideration:

- 1. The class of mare now owned on the farm.
2. The type of horse best suited to the locality, climate, etc.
3. The breed procurable at least expense and most likely to prove profitable in the shortest time.

4. The breed most certain to establish a type which can be depended upon as a steady source of income, the unsold stock to prove serviceable on the farm for general purposes.

The efforts to breed fast horses have failed and only ordinary roadsters have resulted. There is no possibility of profit by pursuing this course because now-a-days trotters are worth very little money unless they can cover a mile in close upon two minutes, and it is well known that less than one per cent. of all the trotters raised on the North American continent can do this.

It is plain therefore that every horse bred on a New Brunswick farm should be of some use on the farm at from two or three years old and earn its keep until sold. A farmer whose land is his only source of income positively cannot afford to keep any kind of horse on his place.

To produce this class of horse he may breed his mares to heavy draught stallions, but the stock has a limited market and brings low prices with scarce any profit, opposition being too strong from the immense western ranches where draught horses of all grades are raised in droves and sold at something like $75 a head. The fact that these horses after shipment east and preparation for work on city pavements sell to consumers at from $200 to $400, more or less, has no bearing upon the farmer's side of the case. These prices include dealers' profits, etc. The farmer has to compete with the actual cash price paid on the large ranches. It is well also to remember that when the profit per head is low a great number of animals must be raised to make the total earnings worth while. If sales are irregular more stock accumulates that can be used to earn their feed on the farm, heavy draught horses being useful only for one purpose.

For relief we naturally turn to the class of horse which, as a matter of fact, only the farmers can produce at a good profit, and that is the carriage horse of much or less quality, action and excellence such as there is a constant and ever increasing demand for in the cities. No other breeder can compete if the farmer starts right. The market for this class of horse is sure, and the prices are much higher in proportion to the first cost and care necessary to prepare the four or five year old stock in the rough for the city dealer, than realized for any other grade of horse that can be produced. But it is absolutely necessary that these horses have high action in front and behind. Action is the essential property that makes the breeding of a carriage horse pay, because the height of their action sells them. To be profitable, however, this action must not be merely the result of education for a few weeks. It must be natural, not forced. The foal must have it at birth, and this cannot be unless the foal is produced from a breed that has had high actions for generations.

Just as a farmer cannot afford to school hunters or train race horses, so he cannot waste time trying to develop high action. His foal must have natural action so that when they are growing into three and four year olds they can be shown loose in a field before a dealer who will pay for them in the rough according to the action they demonstrate.

Now there is but one breed which for centuries has been produced mainly on account of its ability to beget natural high action as suitable for carriage purposes, and that is the Hackney. Originally a pony in the Eastern Counties of England, then developed into what was known for a couple of centuries as the Norfolk trotting cob, from fourteen to fifteen hands in height, carrying its heavy weight owner thirty and forty miles to market and home again, and racing at the trot, sixteen and eighteen miles an hour, and accomplishing for wagers sixty, eighty and a hundred miles in the day, this breed has been carefully conserved by the English farmers who early in the eighteenth century used judicious crosses of Arab, the latter thorough bred blood. Then they bred the stock back to the original Norfolk and Yorkshire nag or Hackney, the product at the present time being a stylish carriage horse with high, snappy action, and substance sufficient to admit of the horse trotting before a heavy fashionable carriage without strain or apparent effort. The height now ranges from 14 to 15 hands for cobs, and to 15 3 hands for full made carriage horses of this breed, and the weight from 800 lbs. for the smaller to 1,000 and 1,250 lbs. for the larger horses.

English farmers who have held on to their foundation stock of this breed and sold annually their young stock, have frequently, during bad harvests, kept their farms clear of debt and saved money from the profits realized on their Hackneys. The horses are raised on upwards of a thousand farms in England, Scotland and Wales. The best specimens are exhibited at about two hundred agricultural shows every season in England where the English Hackney Horse Society exists with membership of two thousand owners and breeders, who have registered since 1854 10,000 stallions and 20,000 mares in the Hackney Stud Book strictly for breeding purposes. The French Government has for many years purchased Hackneys in large numbers and at the present time uses upwards of two hundred Hackney stallions at stud throughout the carriage horse breeding districts of France. Almost all strains of the French Coach horse trace direct into English Hackney blood, as on that depends the action. The Italian Government uses ninety Hackney stallions. In Belgium, Germany, Austria, Russia, India, Australia, Japan, Argentine Republic, Brazil, Chili, Buenos Ayres, and in fact every horse breeding country where carriage horses are used the Hackney is relied upon to perpetuate action.

In Canada the Hackney is held in the highest esteem for producing carriage horses. Now if the Hackney has proved so useful and valuable to English farmers, and to breeders in Scotland and many other countries, and is now gaining a firm footing in the United States and Canada under conditions similar to those which exist in New Brunswick—especially where farmers have started with the best of their own mares, is it not reasonable to believe that the farmers of New Brunswick can accept the Hackney? The Government of Nova Scotia has recently purchased several Hackney stallions and mares and placed them throughout that territory, and results already obtained are highly satisfactory. Surely New Brunswick can do likewise.

A very strong point in favor of the Hackney and its combination with farmer's mares is that the stock matures early without any extraordinary feeding or training. That is to say the stock is brought to a saleable age and condition at the minimum of cost and without risk, the young horses being full bodied, good feeders and looking worth their keep as they grow, and requiring no expert training that is at all dangerous, as would be the case with race horses, fast trotters and hunters. Allowed to run at grass until three years old, and then fed a little extra oats in rookey box stalls and "conditioned" for a few weeks, a well grown colt out of a reasonably good shaped mare and by a Hackney sire of high action, will be quickly purchased by the city dealer, right at the farm. There is no necessity to ship the stock long distances. Now that the demand is so great. All that is necessary is to breed enough stock in any particular district and then let the fact be known through the newspapers and by direct communication with buyers in the city markets, which is a very easy matter. If the farmers keep their best colts until they are past four years old, they can be kept at light farm work and road driving and so earn their feed until they are old. They will be somewhat broken to plain harness.

Lincoln's Hay.

Abraham Lincoln was sitting alone in his office one morning in the fall of '57, when Farmer Simpson paid him an early call. The latter was a thifty son of the soil, but was noted for his ability to increase the tenfold product of the farm in telling the neighbors the result of his harvest. This particular morning he had given Lincoln a padded account of his hay crop. When he had finished, Mr. Lincoln remarked that he, too, had just cut his hay.

'Why, Abe, are you farming?'
'Yes.'
'What do you raise?'
'Just hay.'
'Good crop this year?'
'Excellent.'
'How many tons?'
'Well, I don't know just how many tons, Simpson, but my men stacked all they could outdoors and then stored the rest in the barn.'

The Greatest Explosion of Historic Times.

By DR. EUGENE MURRAY-AARON.

When we speak of the terror of a volcanic eruption, and of what such a manifestation of the explosive power hidden in the earth's interior is capable, we usually think of Vesuvius and its overwhelming of Pompeii and Herculaneum in the year 79 of our Christian era. This is no doubt largely due to the marvellous way in which those cities were covered over by volcanic ash and their contents kept almost intact until the spade has little by little laid them bare. Yet, terrible as was that visitation, we have had within the memory of us and only nineteen years ago, one that was far worse and much more destructive of human life and vast territories than anything else of its kind of which history tells us.

Many no doubt remember the uniformly beautiful sunsets observed almost every day, and throughout the world, during the autumn of 1883, and will also remember that astronomers and physicists told us then that these were the result of the mighty eruption of Krakatua, a volcano on an island of that name in the Strait of Sunda, which connects the Java Sea with the Indian Ocean, between Java and Sumatra, East Indies. For Krakatua had thrown a mighty stream of fine pumice and vapory particles to a height of over twenty miles, and for many weeks these were shifted from point to point by the ever-varying wind currents until their effect upon the light caused every portion of the world to wonder at the exquisite colorings of those sunsets.

There were several stupendous ways in Weak? "I suffered terribly and was extremely weak for 12 years. The doctors said my blood was all turning to water. At last I tried Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and was soon feeling all right again." Mrs. J. W. Fiala, Hadlyme, Ct. No matter how long you have been ill, nor how poorly you may be today, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine you can take for purifying and enriching the blood. Don't doubt it, put your whole trust in it, throw away everything else. $1.00 a bottle. All druggists. Ask your doctor what he thinks of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. He knows all about this grand old family medicine. Follow his advice and we will be satisfied. J. C. AYER CO., Lowell, Mass.

which this interior force in the depth of Krakatua were manifest, each almost beyond human belief and human understanding. Of these the principal were the earth-lifting force, the tidal wave caused by the shock, and the noise of the mighty explosion; and these we will consider in turn.

It has already been noted that to a height of over twenty miles, or one hundred and five thousand feet, Krakatua hurled a volume of pumice, in fine ash, that was literally wafted around the world. Large blocks of pumice, still quite warm, were picked up fifteen miles away. But even better is this mighty force illustrated when we learn that the whole northern part of the island, several square miles in extent, was completely blown out of sight, and where was formerly dry land are now sea soundings, in some points nearly one thousand feet in depth. This upheaval lifted the bed of the deep sea, five or six miles away, so that in places small islands, entirely new structures, appeared above the surface.

Even more resistible must have seemed the mighty earthquake wave which overtook and drowned over thirty thousand people on neighboring islands, some literally hundreds of miles away. A Dutch man-of-war, the Berouw, anchored off the coast of Sumatra, was carried by this wave up a valley nearly two miles inland, and left high and dry more than thirty feet above the sea level. At Telok Betong, fifty miles away, this devastating wave reached within six feet of the resident governor's house, which stood on a hillside seventy-eight feet above the sea-level. No wonder that such a wave, quite twice as high as the average dwelling house, caused so fearful a loss of life both at sea and along the coast of East Indies for many miles. It was even noticed at the Cape of Good Hope, seven thousand five hundred miles away.

However, it seems that when we come to the deafening report or detonation of this unprecedented upburst in the earth's surface, that its wonderful force is most impressed upon us. If a man were to meet a resident of Philadelphia and tell him that he had heard an explosion in Trenton, thirty miles away, he might be believed, although there would be some doubt as to his powers of imagination. If, however, he should make the same assertion of an explosion in Wheeling, West Virginia, three hundred miles away, all doubts of his accuracy and of his imaginative powers would vanish. But if, with every sign of sincerity and a desire to be believed, he should earnestly insist upon his having heard an explosion in San Francisco, three thousand miles away, he would receive a pitying smile, and his listener would silently walk away. Yet just this last marvellous thing was true of those who, on the island of Rodriguez over toward Madagascar, two thousand nine hundred and sixty-eight miles away, heard clearly and beyond doubt the faint sound of the ear-splitting detonation in the Strait of Sunda. In India, in Australia, and in every direction, literally for thousands of miles around this sound was carried. At Karima, Java, three hundred and fifty miles away, native boats put out to sea to look for some imaginary steamer that they felt sure must have exploded out there.

Although not so wonderful to most of us, to scientists the most remarkable feature of all of this most wonderful cataclysm known to man, was the air-wave which preceded from this awful explosion. Such a wave is recorded by instruments known as barographs, wherever observatories, weather bureaus, or life organizations are represented. The barogram records of Krakatua's outburst were such that the report of the Royal Society says: "The character of this disturbance would seem almost incredible were it not for the fact that it is attested by the barograms of every great meteorological station on the world's surface." And this air-wave is recorded as having encircled our globe three times before its marvellous force was finally spent.

So it is quite safe to say, when we are asked the question as to which of all the mighty manifestations of God's power in this world, thus far within the ken of science, has been the most stupendous, the most all-overwhelming that the terrific annihilation of Krakatua, in 1883, surpasses all else.

A smoke that encircled the globe, a wave that travelled seven thousand five hundred miles, a sound heard three thousand miles afar, and an air-shock hurled thrice around the earth—what more can be sought as testimony to the pent-up energies beneath our very feet?

Ping-Pong, a la Tennyson.

Grim portent falls o'er dining halls, Excited hearts full high are beating; O quick! snatch off the table-cloth Before the folks have done their eating. Ping, Father, Ping! Set the wild echoes ringing! And Pong, Mother! Answer echoes, ponging, Panging, Punging!

O hark, O hear! How sharp and clear! As grand-dad plings across the table! O faint and far the echoes are— With Jenkins ponging in the stable, Ping! 'Tis the cook and eke the housemaid flinging Care to the winds and Ponging, Panging, Pinging!

O Love, it palls—this chasing balls That hide themselves in dusty places— While one, alas, lies in the gas. And three knocked over valued vases. Ping! Is it true that angels, no more singing, With harps for bats, go Ponging, Panging, Pinging?

The Great Advantage of Walking.

The great advantage of walking in the open air over other forms of exercise lies in the fact that every muscle of the body is gently and uniformly brought into action by the swing of the legs and the arms, and consequently of the trunk in a vertical direction. The undulations made by the head, chest, and abdomen in a vertical plane are thus not only according to Hogarth's line of beauty, but also in that tending to perfect health. Every internal organ is gently stimulated to more robust action. Never in common walk does a person breathe twice the same air, because he is constantly changing his position.

ARCHIBALD McDONALD, of St. Andrews, had two fingers, the palm of his hand and part of a third finger cut off last Saturday while working at a shingle mill at Goshen, Guys, Co. He was brought to Town and his injuries were attended to by Dr. McDonald.

HIS LORDSHIP confirmed over one hundred children at Canso, last Thursday, and over two hundred at Arichat, on the following day. Instead of feeling fatigued by his work and his rapid travel from place to place, he is, on the contrary, according to a letter received from him here at the end of last week, gaining in strength.

A "YOUNG SCHOOLMISTRESS" writes from Inverness to say that she has read "with pleasure and delight" Old Schoolmaster's letters on Education which appeared in THE CASKET, and congratulated him thereon. "All he has said," she adds, "is fact, and we sincerely hope our educational authorities will take the same to heart."

IN REFERRING to the weather in our last issue we stated that May had been dry and sunny and exceptionally cold, with severe frosts at night. Happily there has been a great change since. We have had heat and abundance of warm rains the past week making ideal growing weather, so that the discouraging crop prospects of last week have given way to a feeling that we are to be favored with at least a good yield of hay.

SUPREME COURT —Following is the docket for the June Term of the Supreme court, which will be opened here next Tuesday, Justice Graham presiding:

Peter Sinclair vs. Charles Cook. Allan Cameron vs. Inverness Railway & Coal Company. John H. Boyd vs. D. D. Chisholm, assignee of J. R. Boyd. Maggie Twomey vs. Catherine McDonald. Edward Conroy vs. C E Knowlton et ux.

SUPREME COURT opened at Guysboro on Tuesday, Judge Graham presiding. There are we understand, a number of cases on the docket. Mr. C. P. Chisholm, Mr. C. E. Gregory and Mr. W. Chisholm, barristers, of Antigonish, are in attendance. One of the causes tried was the King vs. John Murdoch. The accused, a boy aged seventeen years, was charged with assault with intent to do bodily harm in connection with the death of Earl Pye, another boy, at Sherbrooke last March. A verdict of not guilty was returned.

LE BARRE BEAT ANDERSON.—The five-mile matched foot race between W. LeBarre and Frank Anderson attracted a large crowd to Victoria park on Friday evening. The boys went on the mark in good condition and put up an interesting race. For nearly the entire distance they ran side by side, but LeBarre came away at the end and won by about 60 yards. His time was given as 27 minutes.—Hamilton, Ont., Herald.

Le Barre, the winner of the above event, is the runner that is going to compete in the five mile race at Antigonish, on June 12th next, when the great athletic meet of the College will be held.

"ENGAGED," a three act comedy drama, will be presented at McDonald's Hall on next Tuesday evening, by a number of lady and gentlemen amateur entertainers of the Town. Many of them have appeared in public before in similar capacities, and their acting was very acceptable to the audiences who witnessed their performances, while their judgment in selecting suitable drama was good. "Engaged" is replete with humorous incidents. A pleasing evening's entertainment is promised all who attend.

THE FOLLOWING is the programme carried out in Main Street School on "Empire Day," Friday, May 23rd: Song—"The Maple Leaf Forever," March with flags, Reading—"The Men of the Northern Zone," Roche O'Donoghue, Reading—"The Union Jack," James Lee, Essay—"Canada in the Twentieth Century," Dan J. McIsaac, Reading—"Dominion Day," Dan A. Chisholm, Reading—"Canada," Dan J. McIsaac, "God Save The King."

At the close, Prof. A. G. McDonald gave one of his practical addresses to the pupils on "Patriotism," incidentally complimenting both teachers and pupils on their programme, and remarking that the observance of "Empire Day" was a new departure in the procedure of Main Street School which deserved commendation.

SINCE OUR last issue it was found necessary to change the date of the St. F. X. College games from June the 11th to the 12th. This is done partly to give the C. M. B. A. of Cape Breton, who will visit Antigonish on the evening of the 11th, an opportunity of witnessing the sports on the 12th. The change is principally made, however, to give the public a chance to see a new feature in the games. Mr. Charles J. Lucas of Cambridgeport, Mass., now a student of Tufts Medical School, champion potato-racer of the world, will visit Antigonish on that day. He will compete in the potato race which will be held in conjunction with the other events. Mr. Lucas holds the indoor and outdoor records. He smashed the world's record three times last winter and will endeavor to break it again in Antigonish. He has not only won his fame in potato-racing but in short-distance races as well, and will undoubtedly be the star in the 100 yards and the 1/4 mile events. As this will be the biggest Athletic Meet ever held in the Maritime provinces an endeavor will be made to have excursion rates issued on the I. C. R., the particulars of which will be given later.

AT THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Board of school Commissioners for the County of Antigonish, held on the 20th inst., the following sections were placed on the poor list for the school year beginning August, 1902. The Board will in all probability, drop from the list, at its next meeting, such sections as do not operate a school during the year. The sections are: Rear Georgeville, Dunmaglass, Brown's Mountain, Maple Ridge, North Merland, Glassburn, Upper Glen Road, Rear Springfield, Stewart's Mills, Mayfield, Beech Hill, Pinevale, Upper North Grant, Cloverville, Ashdale, Tracadie "colored," Auld's Cove, Middleton, Copper Lake, Morven, West Lakevale, College Grant and Glendale. The Board appointed Rev. Joseph Macdonald, Rev. Dr. Thompson, J. D. Copeland, Esq. and Inspector Macdonald, a committee to report to the next meeting of the Board such a re-division into sections of the territory at present covered by Upper and Lower North Grant, Clydesdale, Upper and Lower Briley Brook, Lower West River and Salt Springs, as will increase the strength and efficiency of the schools of the reconstructed sections by reducing the number of the sections as they now exist. A. G. MACDONALD, Clerk of Board.

GRAND DEDICATION EXERCISES AT ST. PETER'S.—On Sunday last, the 25th inst., the grandest and most impressive exercises ever held in St Peter's was observed. The occasion being the dedication of the new Church which is a large and imposing structure situated on high land and facing out into St. Peter's Bay, the tall spire and cross being visible some miles away as you enter the Bay. The church was taxed to its full capacity. Many of those present were Protestants. They were deeply impressed with the solemn services. Previous to the dedication exercises the children of the parish proceeded over on the steamer Vega, which was especially engaged for the occasion to take the children of the parish over to Descousse to meet his Lordship Bishop Cameron of the Diocese and his party and escort him over to St.

FOOT BALL.—The college foot ball team arrived home on Monday evening from Sydney. Their fellow-students met them at the train, and accorded them a hearty welcome for their thorough defeat of the Sydney foot-ballists on the 24th of May, the score being 7 to 0. The Sydney Post says of the game:

Fully 600 people saw the St. F. X. College football team defeat the S. A. A. A. fifteen on the S. A. A. grounds. This match was one of the features of the celebration of Victoria Day at Sydney and it proved a most popular one. The colors of both teams were conspicuous among the spectators and the "rooting" was equally divided. Quite a number of the students accompanied the team and naturally enough they made themselves heard on the grounds. The college team on the whole, is a good aggregate. Their forwards formed well and quickly. They heeled out well also and the quarters unselfishly fed the halves. Their half back line is good and sure, though a trifle slow in passing. The S. A. A. must have gained at least some knowledge of football from the match. They should practice the art of heeling out of the quarters feeding the halves and of the halves passing along their line. Their game on Saturday was altogether a selfish one and the good players were marred by the blunders of their interiors. On several occasions they lost heavily because of wild and unreasonable throws when the player was tackled by an opponent. The home team was thrown on the defensive early in the game and not till the last half did they appear to put up anything of an aggressive fight.
