Like Cardinal Manning, Archbishop Corrigan was a smiling ascetic. His bedroom was found uncarpeted, and it might be said unfurnished, its contents being a bed, a crucifix, a prie-dieu, a holy water urn, and a statue of the Sacred Heart.

A prominent actress, in an article published recently, entitled "The Matter of the Play," gives voice to sentiments similar to those lately quoted by us from a leading daily of Boston. She says:

To me it seems to be an unfortunate matter that most of the serious plays are what may be called "problem plays." And thus I regard it as an omen of evil for the theatre that the greater and more powerful minds devoted to dramatic literature are, almost without exception, evolving a drama that deals with unhappy or repugnant aspects of life.

A cartoon in an American paper depicts President Palma of Cuba as taking hold of some levers attached to a box labelled "Cuban affairs" and already beginning to dance under an electric shock. The prediction will be justified: The same bands of thieving, lazy niggers who made constant trouble for Spain may shortly be expected to begin their antics again—just as soon as as it is sought to subject them to regularity, order, routine, or worse still to them, work.

The Rev. Hugh Pedley, of Montreal, justified his nice charitable statement that St. Pierre, de Martinique, was destroyed on account of the wickedness of its people, by saying that 66 per cent. of the children born there were illegitimate. Finding the latter statement challenged by the Vicar-General of this diocese, Mr. Pedley falls back on the Encyclopedia Britannica as his authority. With all due respect to this standard authority, it must be said that the second half of its name renders it always suspect when French subjects are in question.

The newly crowned King of Spain is said to be anxious to abolish bull-fighting and substitute horse-racing as the national sport. It may be gravely questioned whether the change would be an improvement. Bull-fighting is bad enough, but we do not believe that it has as demoralizing an effect upon the Spanish population as the Derby, the Oaks, the Grand National, and other races, with their betting accompaniment, have upon the people of England and the colonies. These races have become a huge national gamble which creates beggars, swindlers, embezzlers and suicides to an extent that is alarming the wisest heads in the land. Can any such train of evils be found leading from the bull fight?

When the great earthquake occurred at Lisbon a century and a half ago, John Wesley called it a visitation of God upon Papists. It would be interesting to know whether this excellent man really believed in his heart that Papist Lisbon bore a closer resemblance to Sodom and Gomorrah than Protestant London. The world has grown more tolerant since Wesley's day, yet there have not been wanting preachers to declare that the terrible disaster in Martinique was the vengeance of God upon idolatrous Papists. A church of England missionary, the Rev. R. J. Clarke, just returned from the West Indies, ridicules this, however, pointing out that the same would have to be said of the eruptions in St. Vincent, a perfect reductio ad absurdum in Mr. Clarke's eyes, since St. Vincent is a British island and its people Protestants.

Our provincial papers have taken considerable pains to publish exaggerated accounts of the recent bull-fights in Madrid. The same papers dismiss the lynchings in the Southern States much more easily. The Boston Pilot, which is sane, when the flutter of the British flag does not catch its range of vision, says:

Our Special Ambassador to the coronation of King Alfonso is said to have hidden his face when compelled by court etiquette to attend a bull-fight in Madrid. No doubt the Spanish Ambassador to this country would have veiled his countenance, too, if etiquette had obliged him to attend the public roasting of a negro in Texas, last week, though the telegraph says that a multitude of the leading citizens attended the barbecue, with as much stoicism as so many Spaniards would display in witnessing a bull fight. On the whole we have not much to brag of in the way of a superior civilization, even when we are giving samples of it, on the hydropathic plan, to our reluctant subjects in the Philippines.

Frank Norris, the author says: Every novel must do one of three things—(1) tell something, (2) show something, or (3) prove something. Some novels do all three of these; some do only two; all must do at least one.

Rev. Charles M. Sheldon says: It may be stated in broad terms, that here are three large and legitimate uses for the modern novel: 1. Entertainment. 2. Instruction. 3. Inspiration.

We suppose they use the word "instruction" to include the inculcation of a moral truth. Otherwise there would seem to be something seriously wrong with their classifications. It is easy to tell us what novels ought to do. But any pagan could agree with a summary which leaves him free to put his own construction upon the words "instruction" and "entertainment." These two words are vague enough to cover together all the deviltries ever put through a printing press.

The Pictou Advocate says truth when it says:

The sentiment that induced the Freemasons of St. Louis to call their building a "cathedral" is on a par with that which induces some people to call a "casket" a "casket."

And we give it credit for the truth not the less readily, because it may very well be suspected of an intention to be indecent in this remark. A cathedral is indeed a fitting place for the preservation of the jewels of religion. The other place is a fitting receptacle for the dry and rattling bones of ancient follies which never thrived well in the atmosphere of North America. We regret that we cannot thank the Advocate for its lucid exposition of the principles of masonry,—copied from Webster's dictionary. Webster's dictionary is a book that we have respect for; but we do not think it is the standard guide to which masons appeal when a question comes up among them. We have a copy of Webster's dictionary. It is a useful work; but we have read other books that have some claim to merit also.

We will not try to define for the Pilot the exact effect upon us of various forms and degrees of insult, particularly as our contemporary seems not to have grasped the full meaning of our remarks quoted now in its columns. We will tell it once more, however, as we have several times told it, that we are sad when we detect in the conduct of an educated man, a trace of original ill-breeding which education cannot, apparently, remove, nor culture mitigate. We should indeed be pleased to think that the backwardness of the Irish race in education and culture, caused by harsh laws and long oppression, had not handed down its results so extremely far, that an Irish gentleman, sitting in the editorial chair of a great paper, charming thousands with graceful and learned writings, should still be capable of slipping the mantle of refinement, and clouding his own literary fame with such abominable personal abuse as "Dear old Edward the fat," "King Edward the Emaciated." If the Pilot man finds himself impelled irresistibly to write such nasty things, he has indeed, in that very impulse, some reason for his hatred of England, without whose oppression, the Irish race might perhaps be to-day past the stage in culture where such low abuse is possible.

Julian Hawthorne, the well known Protestant writer, penned the following beautiful tribute to the Catholic priest:

hood in his account of the funeral of the late Archbishop Corrigan:

It was a marvellous sight to see the profile of these priestly heads passing successively one after another, bowed and serious. Endless was the variety of types; inexhaustible the diversity of character; they were old and young, high and low, noble and plain, dignified and awkward, stern and mild; humble and proud, strong and weak; none was like another in all that multitude; and yet all had in common one look—the look of mingled authority and obedience. There is no other look that can be mistaken for it in the tribes of mortal men; it told of such a training and discipline as no other men are called on to sustain. It was the look worn by those who spread the doctrines of the Church over the face of the earth; who worked and suffered and died to save souls in the primeval wilderness; who have built up in their fellow man this mighty fact of the Catholic Church. It allied them one with another and brought them into unity in one stupendous organism, the body of Christ.

They constitute one of the greatest forces created on earth; quiet, subtle, omnipresent, well-nigh irresistible. Behind them lies a history of deeds unparalleled. And after two thousand years they seem as strong, as compact and purposeful as in the days of the early Fathers.

These are men who overthrew paganism, and who rule to-day the larger part of the Christian world. From them emanated the holy army of martyrs and the company of the saints; from their ranks were chosen the Popes who governed Europe and turned the tides of history. Their outward temporal power is no longer what it was; but the power of no temporal monarch equals theirs. Authority and obedience mingle in their aspect; these are the virtues to which the world succumbs.

To add anything to this would be but to spoil its simplicity and beauty.

It is the frequent custom of many thoughtless people, when they really have not much to complain about, to cry out for yet greater freedom and enjoyment. A man will grow sometimes at a soft slipper, because he fancies it hampers his foot too much, and again he will trudge for miles contentedly in the stiffest and most uncomfortable of footwear when he has more important things to think about. When men have no particular grievance of genuine importance, they needs must invent some. It is a standing grievance with some people, at sometimes, that there should be any laws at all to prevent them from doing as they please. It is not so long since we heard something in this Province of the folly of preserving in our legal system such remedies as injunctions. "Government by injunction" is a cry that arises once in a while and has a popular ring to it. Now, we notice that in the great neighboring Republic, an intolerable state of affairs recently arose. In that land of combines and of fakes men have of late years been much accustomed to pile their money together to scrooge the poor consumers in the price of various things. The evil of trusts has not always come home, however, to the minds of the people, and most men have read of these movements carelessly, as of the antics of the rich in lesser matters. Recently, however, the people have found that an article of food, so necessary that its price must always be paid attention to, namely, beef, had got somewhat beyond their reach. We venture to say that there are many thousands of people to-day in the states who have a clearer idea of the evils of trade combines than they ever had before, on account of the operations of the beef trust. Now, it is a notable fact that, when the citizens came to seek relief from this burden, they found a friend where labor unions had long declared there lurked an enemy, that is, in the ancient law of injunctions. Great and strong efforts are being made to get the courts to issue injunctions to restrain this combine, and people who looked askance upon "government by injunction" as they were pleased to call it, look to it to govern the blood-suckers of commerce. All of which illustrate the folly of making sweeping alterations in any of the safeguards of public administration, except when we are sure (and we seldom can be sure) that the necessities which gave rise to them can never confront us again.

At Sherbrooke, P. Q., Judge Mulvena committed L. G. Belanger, K. C., to the court of King's bench on 11th inst. to stand his trial for having conspired by deceit to defraud Charles Bresse out of $4,000. The trouble is partly a family and partly a partnership difficulty. The magistrate in committing expressed regret at having to act.

COLLEGE CLOSING.

The exercises in connection with the closing of St. Francis Xavier's College were this year cast on a more elaborate scale than in former years. An excursion of C. M. B. A. people from Sydney, Glace Bay, and Bridgeport, brought hither some three or four hundred persons, who, with the people of the town and surrounding country, helped to swell the crowd that gathered on Wednesday evening in the College Rink to witness the closing. The exercises opened with an address from the Rev. Dr. Thompson, Rector of the College, in which, after touching upon the past history of the institution, and the great work it had done and was doing for higher education, he paid a well-deserved tribute to the men who had helped in the upbuilding of it, and in particular to its greatest benefactor and second founder, his Lordship the Bishop of the diocese. The address was followed by the reading of the class list showing the standing of each student. It will be given in next week's CASKET. The list of prizes distributed, with the name of the winner in each case, will be found in this issue. The degree of B. A. was conferred on the following young men who had completed the arts course and fulfilled the required conditions:

Beaton, Daniel, Mabou, C. B.
MacDonald, A. J., Black Avon, Ant. Co.
MacIntosh, A., Lismore, Pict. Co.
MacKinnon, J. J., Ardness, " "
MacNeil, Jno., Baddeck, C. B.
Rawley, W. P. A., Halifax
Ryan, W. J., Canso.

The degree of Bachelor of Science was conferred on George MacDonald, one of the professors of the College.

After the reading of the graduates' essays and the conferring of degrees, all went to the Cathedral, where the Rev. D. M. MacAdam, P. P., Sydney, preached the Baccalaureate Sermon—a solid and eminently practical discourse which we hope to lay before our readers next week. The exercises closed with Solemn Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

At Mount St. Bernard's.

The closing exercises at Mt. St. Bernard were held at 5 o'clock the same afternoon in the Convent Hall, which was fittingly decorated for the occasion. The programme, which opened with music and a notable essay on the Higher Education of Women by Miss Rosemary Landry, B. A., was excellent and well carried out. The essays, of which there were four altogether, were all of them good, and the music, songs, and choruses were well rendered. A striking and impressive feature was the singing of Newman's noble hymn "Lead Kindly Light" by the Misses Webb, Macdougall, and Beckwith. The prize list, which together with the class list will be found elsewhere in this issue, was a long one. The degree of B. A. was conferred on Miss Rosemary Landry and Miss Margaret MacNeil. Following are the graduates in the English course:

Miss Agnes McIsaac, Antigonish, N. S.;
Miss Annie McManus, Memramcook, N. B.;
Miss Martha Harriet Sampson, L'Ardoise, N. S.;
Miss Mary Elizabeth Tompkins, E. Margaree, N. S.;
Miss Mary McKenna, Antigonish, N. S.

The Alumnae of Mount St. Bernard held its first meeting on Friday evening, May 30. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Honorary President, Rev. Mother Superior
Directress of the Alumnae, " "
A Teacher of the Graduates
1st Vice-President, Miss Mary J. McIsaac, B. A.
2nd " " Miss Margaret McKinnon, B. A.
Secretary, Miss Margaret F. Macdougall
Treasurer, Miss M. Angela O'Brien
Executive Committee—Misses C. J. MacDonald, G. Mackenzie, Isabelle Chisholm, Maude McKinnon and Helen McDonald.

A most enjoyable banquet was tendered the members of the Alumnae in the Convent Refectory on the evening of Thursday, June 12th. The toast-master of the evening, Miss I. Chisholm, proposed the several toasts in a very pleasing manner, thus showing that the selection of toast-mistress was a wise one. The first toast proposed, "Our Venerable Bishop," was responded to by Miss C. J. McDonald, who dwelt upon the deep debt of gratitude the pupils of Mount St. Bernard owe His Lordship Bishop Cameron in having erected for them an institution wherein Education in the truest sense of the term is imparted.

Miss Florence McDonald, B. A., responded to the toast "The Faculty of St. Francis Xavier's College" in her usual happy manner.

"The Congregation De Notre Dame" was treated in a graceful manner by Miss Gertrude McKenzie.

"Our Honorary President and other Officers" was responded to by Miss Mary J. McIsaac, B. A., who fittingly paid deserving tribute to Rev. Mother Superior and the other officers of the Alumnae.

Miss Margaret F. Macdougall, B. A., Principal of Main St. School, responded very fittingly to the toast "Our Alumnae Teachers." She recognized in the Alumnae teachers a body of enthusiastic and conscientious workers, and referred with inspiring earnestness to the great responsibilities of the teachers.

To "The Class of '02," one of this year's fair graduates Miss Rosemary Landry appropriately made reply.

The toast "The Gentlemen," held an important place in the minds of many of the fair members assembled and was humorously and cleverly responded to by Miss M. Maude McKinnon, B. A.

The last toast "Alma Mater" drew from Miss Helen McDonald a sympathetic response.

This inaugural meeting was in every way successful, and from the enthusiasm displayed presaged many more of such.

Bishop Cameron at Boisdale.

On Thursday, June 12, his Lordship Bishop Cameron was at Boisdale, on his official tour. Very early in the morning crowds of men, women and children were to be seen coming from all directions to attend Mass and to see their venerable and beloved Bishop. When service began, at eight o'clock, the beautiful church at Boisdale was crowded. His Lordship was assisted by Revs. M. A. McPherson and A. F. McGillivray. After Mass he preached an eloquent and impressive sermon; and administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to quite a large number. After the service was over the whole congregation marched behind him from the church to the Glebe House keeping time to the martial strains of two bag pipes. All along the way was lined with rows of trees. There were also two evergreen arches with inscriptions which silently expressed the feelings of the parishioners of Boisdale. In about an hour's time, with flags gaily flying, with church bell loudly pealing, with bag pipes steadily playing, and a beautiful day withal, the procession again followed his Lordship to the railway station where he boarded the train for Christmas Island.

At the Altar Rail.

Here at the rail, where the step is worn,
And the rays of the hanging lamp are brightest,
We make a renewal of fervor, born
In the days when our souls were at their whitest,
And the dear baptismal vows repeat,
While the tranquil tears fall fast and sweet.
O friends! though we're forced with the world to grapple,
With the terrible, tempting world outside—
There are seasons of truce in the dear old chapel,
When our souls in the peace of the Lord may bide.
For the shrine of the Sacred Heart therein Shall our stronghold be from strife and sin!
—E. C. DONNELLY.

Harvesters who Need Help.

One impressive fact is worth any amount of argument and exhortation; and we cannot help thinking that if those who are commissioned to collect funds for foreign missions would only set concrete y before the laity what our missionaries are suffering and accomplishing, the rest of the work would be easy. For instance, here is a paragraph from a letter which a special correspondent of the New York Evening Post lately sent from China:

An impressive index of the extent of infanticide I encountered two years ago at Shihwante, the centre of the Catholic missions at Mongolia, the former residence of the celebrated Abbe Huc. Here in this out-of-the-way place in the country, far away from any city, were 200 Chinese girls in the Catholic mission school, and they were as interesting and attractive a body as could be found anywhere in any country; but we were told, by the self-denying Belgian missionaries who had consecrated their lives to the work, that all these girls had as infants been exposed by their parents to death, from which they had been rescued and brought to the interesting state of development in which we saw them.

A missionary in India, whose parish is larger than many dioceses even in our own country, thus explains the need of schools and Chapels in Ullal, and the difficulties he has to contend with in ministering to a widely scattered flock who as yet number only a very small portion of the population of the district:

The faithful often have to walk more than twenty miles in order to see the priest, to hear Mass, to make their Easter duties. I remember that on the day of the consecration of India to the Sacred Heart, after the parochial Mass which was sung after 11.45 a. m., and followed by the consecration and Benediction, several souls flocked around my confessional. It was then past two o'clock and some of them had to come from a distance of eighteen miles, and after Communion were obliged to walk home fasting. But their poor pastor, in order to visit them, must make similar journeys on foot over hills, valleys and streams. He can neither ride nor drive nor cycle, on account of the peculiar state of the country. . . . Some of my predecessors as well as myself narrowly, and miraculously even, escaped death during these visits. The congregation here is composed of the caste called Goudies, and they are despised not only by their rich pagan and Mussulma: landlords, but even by their fellow-Christians who belong to a higher caste.

Being without schools in such an extensive parish we find it very hard to instruct our people. The German Lutherans have been alluring our children by their splendidly built schools. We intend to build school-houses a few miles apart, but lack of funds and support is a great barrier. Strange as it may seem, the pagans prefer to send their children to us, as they look with distrust upon the Protestant ministers who have wives, and their new religion. They are accustomed to Catholic churches and institutions which have existed among them for centuries.

Now, we cannot imagine any Catholic reading these extracts without instantly feeling interest and sympathy, with the desire to express those emotions in the most practical way. Small-souled people, of course, will protest that we have much the same work to do in this country, and that charity should begin at home. So it ought, but there is no reason why it should stay at home. No individual or parish or diocese ever became poorer on account of its generosity to foreign missions. "Let us confess it," said a French bishop in a recent address,—"it is a cause of deep humiliation for all christians to see that nineteen centuries after Christ died on Calvary and sent His messengers to announce that heaven is open, there are still millions of men who never heard of it. Can there be a more sorrowful spectacle for a true Christian? There can be one, and that is to see Christians indifferent to that state of things."

The daily life of our missionaries in pagan lands furnishes no end of heroic effort and incredibly great achievement, which need only be known to insure enthusiastic support for the foreign missions. And what harvest many of them promise! There is the Vicariate of Nankin, in China, for instance, with a population of 50,000,000, only 110,000 being Catholics—all the rest pagans, to be brought to the knowledge of Jesus Christ! —The Ave Maria.

How Victor Hugo Died.

France has just finished celebrating the centenary of Victor Hugo, the greatest of her nineteenth century poets. The feasts organized for the occasion, under the auspices of the government, were of a splendor little short of an apotheosis.

If nothing but his literary genius had been exalted, there would not be any other fault to find with the honors bestowed upon the dead poet, except that they went far beyond the limit one would look for among any other people but the French. Since, however, the celebration's speechmakers also held him up to the admiration of his countrymen and of the world's citizens as a paragon of civic and all other virtues, the lovers of truth are entitled to register a protest; for, alas! Victor Hugo was anything but virtuous.

If he wrote grand poetry and noble prose, especially in his youth, he also wrote most immorally and irreligiously. For years, and up to the time of his death, his private life was scandalous. He made an immense fortune by his writings, yet he was almost miserably in his avarice. Thus, he left 10,000,000 francs to his heirs; and to a political refugee, who had nursed him through a long and tedious sickness, with an almost heroic devotion, and to whom he had promised in grandiloquent accents an eternal gratitude, he gave a guinea when the poor man fell sick himself and was starving from want and hunger. The great man's towering ambition was to be a statesman and political leader; and he never succeeded in being anything but a political weathercock. He tried every party that held the boards in France during his long life, being, in turns, Legitimist, Orleanist, Bonapartist, Republican, Socialist. His egotism and fickleness prevented his success in politics; and his vanity, pride and sensuality lost him to the faith in which he had been reared and of which he posed as the defender in the years of his budding genius.

Rev. Father Boone, pastor of Christ Church at Guernsey, where Victor Hugo exiled himself, is authority for the statement that the poet's household were all attentive to their religious duties, and that the poet himself spoke his regret for having so entangled himself as not to be in a situation to live the life of a practical Catholic. Of course, the enemies of religion who needed Hugo for their war upon Catholicism in France, did everything to keep their idol and their tool from reconciling himself with the Church. When he was in the throes of death, Cardinal Guibert made an effort to be admitted to the sick-room; but to no avail. The poet died without priestly administration; and triumphant Freethought elaborated a funeral which, for outward splendor and display, surpassed anything that France had ever seen.

Renegade though he was, his last inmate remains were laid to wait the day of reckoning in the temple reared by Catholic Paris to her sweet patron—St. Genevieve. By order of a godless republic the saint had to make room for the blasphemer who had died a stranger to the faith which she had contributed to illustrate by her virtues and miracles. On the day preceding Victor Hugo's funeral, Masses were offered up for the last time in the Church of St. Genevieve, and the Lord of Hosts was removed from the Tabernacle. To the infidel government of France the poet was greater than the saint, greater than God. Their house became his mausoleum; but it retained the standard of its former Lord—the cross. That cross surmounting the edifice's highest pinnacle was an eyesore to impiety; it must be hauled down. So did man decree; but the cast-iron mass, weighing some 3,000 pounds, held its own, in spite of desperate efforts, and refused to be hauled down. It continues to extend its arms over the city, to the discomfort of the pigmies who want to rule over a nation and cannot rule over a few thousand pounds of matter.

An hour after Victor Hugo's death an actor, who was one of his great admirers, was surreptitiously admitted to the death chamber. He was startled at the dead man's expression of anguish and despair, and said to the valet who had introduced him: "How frightful he looks!" "Ah, sir," answered the valet, "just before his last breath the master raised himself on his coach and called out twice: 'A priest, a priest!' " The actor went immediately to his home and, with an accent of deep emotion he said to his daughter: "I don't want to die like Victor Hugo died. When I'll be taken sick, you'll call Father Mon. abre. I shall not speak of what I saw, but at any rate, it was terrible." —Rev. J. Van Der Heyden in the Catholic Sentinel.

Acts of Reverence.

If the Blessed Sacrament is in the Tabernacle the Rubric commands us to make a genuflection on one knee every time we pass in front of it, as well as on coming before it and leaving. If it be exposed on the Altar we are instructed to make a genuflection on both knees, and bow profoundly the head and body.

The Blessed Sacrament is kept in most Churches all day and all night. Its presence is indicated by the red lamp that constantly burns before it. If the lamp is not burning the Blessed Sacrament is not present; and it is wrong in this case to make a genuflection. It may occur often that the Blessed Sacrament may be on some Altar where it is not usual to keep it; and it may happen that it is not, at all times, in the Tabernacle, where it is wont to be kept.

For instance, if Confessions are heard in the basement of the Church, the Blessed Sacrament may be there sometimes and not at others times. If it is there, the red lamp will tell; if not, it is simply an act of reverence to boards to genuflect. Genuflection is a form of reverence which is reserved for the Blessed Sacrament, except on special occasions when we genuflect to the Cross. It shows thoughtlessness to make a genuflection when the Blessed Sacrament is not present.

For a simple genuflection on one knee, we are directed to keep the left foot still, and, bending the left leg, bring the right knee down to the left heel without at all inclining the body. A genuflection on the left knee is wrong, and should not be used, even by those who are inclined to use the left foot and the left hand, more than the one that most of us use for important functions.

A good many women make the mistake of genuflecting on the left knee instead of the right and also of accompanying the act with a profound bow of the body, which is also wrong. The body ought to be kept perfectly erect. The Church would not make these regulations, if She were not wise enough to know that there are many who have no idea of the fitness of things. Neither would She make the laws about the Church music (which are not observed) if She were not conscious of the same failing in her children.

Men make the mistake of not bringing either the right or the left knee to the ground, or even near it. They seemingly think it sufficient to tip the right or the left toe to the ground, at some distance behind them. That is not the way the Church says it ought to be done; and if the Church never said a word about it, people ought to have respect enough for the Blessed Sacrament not to do things like this. It is another case of the fitness of things.

Do not, then, make a genuflection anywhere but in a Church, or some other place where the Blessed Sacrament is kept; and when you do make it, follow out these directions:—Keep the left foot still; bend the left knee and bring the right knee down to the ground at the point where the left heel rests.

That is plain enough, and anybody with a sense of the fitness of things, and a sense, too, of the presence of our Lord in the Blessed Sacrament, should be recollected enough to take the trouble to make this act of reverence properly.

During the Forty Hours' Devotion, and at other times when the Blessed Sacrament is exposed on the Altar, the Rubric directs us to go on both knees, and then make a profound bow of the head and the body. The kneeling position should be taken first and then the bow made.

This is the form of reverence that ought to be made if you happen to come into the Church late for Benediction.

It does not seem consistent for people to say that they believe in the Real Presence, and then come to the Church and behave disrespectfully. It will not do to say, that you did not think, at the time, that the Lord was there—that you forgot yourself. Nobody ought to forget that the greatest reverence is due to the Blessed Sacrament. These external acts of reverence are very important; and the Church shows that She regards them as such; else, why all the detailed instructions that She has laid down about the conduct of the Ministers upon the Altar and the conduct of the Faithful in the Church?

When passing the Church, on the outside, it is the custom with Catholic men to lift their hats—an act of reverence to Our Lord within. Some of the more "respectable" ones are at times ashamed to do this—more about them later on. They are a class that cannot be dealt with in a paragraph.

We saw some children, even blessing themselves when passing; which shows that the people who taught them such a practice have no idea of the fitness of things. It is something that very soon would develop hypocrisy. Give us anything but a taste of that. The practice is out of place and nonsensical.

We are sure that people who teach children to do silly things like this, have no idea of what ought to be done in the Church. Still "crank" is flung at us when we talk about music that fits the Services!

The Lord gave every man two knees and the two ought to be used when kneeling to worship Him. It is outrageous to see people kneeling around the doors during Mass, and using but one knee. It is far more respectful to stand and pray than to go on one knee, as if the other was intended for something, other than the worship of its Maker.—The Cross.

While agreeing with everything else that is said in this excellent article, we think our esteemed Halifaxian contemporary's criticism of the practice taught these little ones somewhat too severe. Of course the practice is not to be recommended in every locality. But in our rural Catholic communities especially, why should not the making of the sign of the cross in passing the church, so to be done reverently, be as free from all taint of hypocrisy as is the beautiful custom observed in our Acadian parishes where the people bare their heads and kneel by the roadside as the priest passes by bearing the Blessed Sacrament to the sick? —ED. Mrs. Westfield and Grace had not long to wait in their terrible suspense, for in a very few minutes a noisy, laughing troop of horsemen had reined up before the gate, open the door of the little room, she boldly

'Somewhat of an unceremonious visit, gentlemen,' she said, in a firm, even tone.
'What may be the meaning of it?'

The leader of the gang, apparently, was a short, ill-favored looking man of middle age, beardless, though anything but clean-shaven, and generally dirty and dissipated

With the air of bold assurance he eyed his interlocutor, and, turning, addressed one of his companions before answering.

'A merry-eyed and comely wench—eh,
Jacob? A wench after your own heart—eh,
Jacob? A nice, trim—'

'Enough of that, sir!' rang out the rich clear voice. 'I am Miss Westfield, of

'If your orders are to search, it will

You will doubtless obey your orders whatman. 'And, besides which, and likewise

THE CASKET,

M. DONOVAN, Manager

Terms: $1.00 per Year in Advance

There is what is called the worldly spirit which enters with the greatest subtlety into the character of even good people...

THURSDAY, JUNE 19.

Sudden Death of Judge McIsaac.

About eleven o'clock on Thursday morning last, when nearly all of last week's issue of THE CASKET had been printed, the startling news spread through the town that Judge McIsaac had died very suddenly.

The late Judge McIsaac was born at the home of his parents near St. Andrew's, Antigonish County, in February, 1840. In his childhood he went to live with his maternal grandparents, the late John and Margaret McGillivray, at Malignat Brook...

After graduating, he filled the chair of Classics in his Alma Mater for several years and later was Principal of the Academy at Arichat, where he commenced the study of law in 1867, in the office of the late Mr. Croke.

In 1882 he married Mary, daughter of the late Patrick Power of Halifax and sister of Hon. L. G. Power, the present speaker of the Senate.

The death of Judge McIsaac under any circumstances would have occasioned great sorrow. Coming, as it did, with such awful suddenness, it caused a most painful shock to all.

But it was not in the mere natural virtues alone that he set a worthy example: his worldly success did not cause him, as it does too many, to neglect his God.

scrupulously obeyed withal the injunction of his Divine Master against letting the one hand know of the other's charity.

The Alumni Association of his Alma Mater, of which he was a valued member, was in session when his sudden death was announced to its members...

Resolved.—That the members of the Alumni Association of Saint Francis Xavier's College, in session at their annual meeting, have learned with feelings of the deepest grief and pain the news of the sudden death...

From all parts of the County, and many places outside its limits, mourning friends came to attend his funeral on Saturday forenoon. The procession, one of the most extensive ever seen here, was led by a goodly number of the clergy...

Most sincerely do we join in the expression of profound sympathy with the grief-stricken family and relatives of the lamented dead and in the prayer that his soul may enter into life everlasting.

Confirmation at River Bourgeois, C.B.

About 2 30 p. Sunday, 25th ult., His Lordship, the Right Reverend Bishop Cameron left St. Peter's for River Bourgeois. He was accompanied by the Rev. A. Thompson, D. D., President of the University of St. Francis Xavier's College...

At 7 30 a. m. Monday, His Lordship celebrated Mass and preached in his own inimitable style a most instructive sermon in English. He then administered the holy Sacrament of confirmation to 127 persons...

In the afternoon, His Lordship drove to L'Ardoise, some 14 miles without feeling the least fatigued, tho' the previous day he celebrated Mass, confirmed more than 200 persons, preached two sermons, blessed a Church and travelled 15 miles over water and land in disagreeable weather.

DEATHS.

Obituary and marriage notices have been gradually encroaching on our space. The attention of our publishing company being called to the matter at the annual meeting, it was decided to limit the space for these notices, except where the event appears to be of general interest. The best way to mark this limit seems to be to adopt the plan employed by many other papers: Notices of deaths will be published free of charge when not exceeding 40 words. For every word over 40, 2 cents will be charged, payment in advance.

At Glencoe, Ont., on the 15th inst., after a short illness, in the 73rd year of her age, ANNE, the beloved wife of Alexander McDonald, and daughter of the late James McDonald of James River, Ant. Deceased by reason of her many sterling qualities will be much missed by all who knew her. After Requiem High Mass her remains were interred in the presence of a large concourse who attended. A sorrowing husband, four sons and two daughters now mourn the loss of a devoted and dutiful wife and mother. R. I. P.

At Glace Bay, June 7, of heart disease, Mrs NEIL McKEINNON, aged 71 years. Deceased, whose maiden name was Christie Farrell, moved from Grand Narrows to this Town 22 years ago. She was of a quiet and retiring disposition, and was highly esteemed by all who knew her. She leaves to mourn her loss, her husband, four sons and three daughters. Consolated and strengthened by the frequent reception of the Sacraments, there passed away at Canso on the 13th inst., Mrs. JOHN J. McEACHER, aged 29 years. Although conscious from the first that her illness must result fatally, she manifested through the long weary months of painful waiting for the dread message, the same sweet and cheerful disposition that had ever been hers. May her soul find rest eternal in the Sacred Heart, devotion to which she promoted so zealously during life!

Queer Things at Crownings.

A royal coronation is an event of such solemn importance, at least to the participants in it, and the preparations for it are made so long in advance, that one would think it impossible for anything about it to be allowed to go amiss.

William the Conqueror was invested on Christmas Day, 1066, with a brand new crown richly decorated with gems. The Saxon and Norman nobles were gathered in Westminster Abbey, and the spectators of each nation were called upon in their own language to say whether they accepted William as King.

TRYING TO OUTWIT THE ARCHBISHOP.

When Henry I. married his second wife, Adelicia or Adeliza of Louvain, he had a second double coronation, and on this occasion the performance was well worth the price of admission.

Roger, Bishop of Salisbury, claimed the right to perform the marriage ceremony because Windsor was in his diocese. Ralph of Escures, Archbishop of Canterbury, vehemently denied this pretension, and an ecclesiastical council decided that the King and Queen were parishioners of the Archbishop in whatever part of England they might be.

Queen Elizabeth had some trouble in being properly crowned for lack of prelates to perform the ceremony. Of all the bishops of her realm only one would consent to take part in the coronation, although most of them were present as spectators.

Charles I. wore white velvet at his coronation instead of purple or crimson. This was attributed by some to the advice of Archbishop Laud, who had a notion that white as the emblem of innocence would be an appropriate thing to wear, and by others to the fact that it was found at the last moment that the merchants of London were all out of velvet of the royal color.

James II. spared no expense or trouble in his coronation. He had a feast of 1445 dishes, a gorgeous procession and superb trappings. Nevertheless, he could not prevent a series of mishaps that took on a deadly significance when he was chased from his throne three years later.

The venerable Lord Rolle fell down as he was getting up the steps of the throne, and when afterwards he started to mount again to do homage, the Queen said: "May

When the signal was given that James was crowned the flag on the Tower was torn by the wind. The canopy of cloth of gold which was held over the King's head was rent on the way home from the Abbey.

When William and Mary were crowned somebody stole the King's purse, and when it became his duty to put a contribution in the offertory he had to borrow the money from Lord Danby.

Queen Anne and the Souvenir Fiends. Queen Anne was not able to stand alone to be crowned. She was the only English sovereign that ever had to be held up by others on such an occasion.

The Earl Marshal forgot the sword of state, the royal banquet chairs and the canopy. The Lord Mayor of London lent his sword and a jury canopy was rigged.

To George IV, "the First Gentleman of Europe," who once achieved the feat of inventing a shoe buckle, a coronation would obviously be just the sort of thing to call out the full powers of his mind.

THE GIRLISH KINDNESS OF VICTORIA. At the coronation of Victoria, the Queen attracted general admiration, but hardly anybody else missed a chance to blunder. Greville, in his Memoirs, remarks:

The different actors in the ceremonial were very imperfect in their parts, and had neglected to rehearse them. Lord John Thynne, who officiated for the Dean of Westminster, told me that nobody knew what was to be done except the Archbishop and himself (who had rehearsed), Lord Willoughby (who is experienced in these matters), and the Duke of Wellington, and consequently there was a continual difficulty and embarrassment, and the Queen never knew what she was to do next.

"What am I to do with it?" "Your Majesty is to carry it, if you please, in your hand."

The ruby coronation ring, according to the rubric, should go on the fourth finger. In this case the ring had been made for the little finger, which the Queen accordingly held out when the proper time came.

I not get up and meet him? Rising from the throne, she went down, one or two of the steps to prevent him from coming up, an act of kindness which, "made a great sensation."

As that was the third coronation within seventeen years the actors really ought to have known their parts. There will be more excuse for mishaps this time, for no participant in the proceedings ever saw such a ceremony before.

Teaching Dogma.
Mr. John Dillon in his striking speech before the British House of Commons, on the occasion of the second reading of the Education bill, said:
"With regard to the question of Christian teaching, he gathered that there was a unanimous desire not to abolish Christian teaching. But was not Christian teaching sectarian? Was not the teaching of the divinity of our Lord one of the greatest dogmas that lay at the whole root of their religion? Of course it was. And there were honorable members prepared to stand up and state that nothing was dogma in which they believed but that everything was dogma in which others believed. Why, he asked honorable members who denounced the principle of sectarian teaching, did they speak of the Bible in teaching? Why not Shakespeare or Plato for any other book of moral teaching? Did they believe in the sacred character of the Bible, and was not that dogma? Was it not dogma to say that the Bible was sacred scripture! the position of those gentlemen was simply this. They said, 'Orthodoxy is my Joxy, and heterodoxy is everybody else's doxy.' A more preposterous position was never taken up. The moment they completely broke with principle of sectarian teaching they must banish Christianity and the Bible, or else bring it in, as it was brought in by some of the foreign schools, as a beautiful poem to be placed alongside of the poems of Shakespeare and others. If they treated the Bible as sacred scripture they were teaching dogma. He had listened to everything said in that debate, and not one of the charges which had been made against denominational schools had been affected by the position of the Catholic schools."

is but a drop in the bucket and unless we can make a pleased customer of you our business is a failure, and unless the shoes we sell you please you in every detail no amount of newspaper advertising could make up the deficiency. Our patrons are our greatest advertising medium, pro or con. Hence our close attention to details. Perfection is composed of details. Hence our recommending "Sovereign Shoes" to you. They are "detail" shoes—excelling in minor points, probably just a little more style—probably just a little more comfort or service, all showing scrupulous care in manufacturing. SUDDEN DEATH.—Jonathan McKinnon, an aged and respected resident of Grand Lake, C. B., dropped dead on last Thursday, while out in the pasture after the cows. He leaves one son, Michael, and four daughters—Mrs. Joseph Morrison, Sydney; Mrs. James Keefe, Glace Bay; Sister St. Gregory, at present of the Convent at Sydney Mines, but last year of St. Bernard's Convent, Antigonish, and Miss Christina McKinnon of Glace Bay. May he rest in peace!

Drummond, of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, will address a series of agricultural meetings as follows: At Pine Tree, Pictou County, on Monday, 23rd inst.; at Marshy Hope, Tuesday, 24th inst.; at the Court House, Antigonish, on Wednesday, 25th, at 2.30 p. m.; at Heatherton, Thursday, 26th; at St. Andrews and Upper South River on Friday, 27th, and at Lochaber, Saturday, 28th. The lectures will embrace the following subjects: "Bacon, Hog and Pork Production"; "Selection, Breeding and Care of Dairy Cattle"; "Cultivation of the Soil"; "Notes on Chicken Feeding"; "Summer Care of Dairy Cows."

A TELEGRAM was received here on last Saturday conveying the intelligence that Dr. John Thompson of Cambridge, Mass., had that morning undergone an operation for appendicitis and that his condition was grave. Advices since only increase the anxiety over his state. Rev. Dr. Thompson of the College, a brother of the patient, left on Saturday evening for his bedside. The knowledge that Dr. Thompson is a man of fine physique, of good habits, and had heretofore enjoyed the best of health, gives strength to the hope that he will yet recover. All who know him will earnestly pray for his restoration to health.

A GRACEFUL ACT.—On occasion of the C. M. B. A. excursion to Antigonish last week, the contingent from Glace Bay, numbering over a hundred, remembered in a graceful way their late lamented pastor Rev. Father Chisholm, whose remains are interred in his native parish of Heatherton. Wednesday, the 11th inst., was the fourth anniversary of Father Chisholm's burial. The special train which brought the excursionists to Antigonish on that day stopped over for an hour at Heatherton. There many of the parishioners with their pastor were awaiting its arrival. Immediately on its reaching the station the Glace Bay people, headed by their pastor and accompanied by many other members of the C. M. B. A. and several priests, proceeded in a body to Father Chisholm's grave to deposit a wreath and offer up a prayer for the repose of his soul. On the day before they had had a High Mass of Requiem celebrated in the parish church for the same intention, the rubric not permitting the service on the day itself. These acts go to show how green in the hearts of his former parishioners is still the memory of the good Father Chisholm. They are creditable at the same time to the Catholic people of Glace Bay.

HYMENEAL.—St. Andrew's Church, St. Andrew's, was the scene of a very interesting event on Tuesday, 10th inst., when Hannah S., daughter of Archibald McDonald, St. Andrews, and Dan A. McDonald, of Watertown, Mass., formerly of Beech Hill, this County, were united in holy matrimony by Rev. James Fraser, P. P. Miss Mamie M. McIntosh of St. Andrews and Mr. Roderick K. McIntyre, of Cambridge, Mass., supported the contracting parties. After the ceremony the happy couple with a number of friends repaired to the home of the bride's father, where a sumptuous dinner was partaken of and a pleasant afternoon spent. Mr. and McDonald left on the evening train for Boston, and will reside at their new home on Maple Avenue, Watertown. The bride received many handsome and appropriate presents.

A very pretty marriage was celebrated at St. Ninian's Cathedral, Antigonish, on Tuesday morning, Rev. Joseph McDonald, P. P., officiating, the groom being Mr. Alfred Carroll, Hawthorne street, Antigonish, and the bride Miss Mary Lil Grant also of this Town, both of whom are highly respected and esteemed here. Mr. Ed. McIntosh attended the groom during the ceremony and Miss Margaret McKenzie the bride. A large number of their friends gathered at the Cathedral to witness the nuptials. The wedding party partook of a bounteous repast at the home of Mr. Dan Chisholm, merchant, the bride's uncle, after which the newly-married couple left for Sydney, where they will reside for a time. The bride was presented with numerous tokens of the regard of friends.
