During Mr. W. E. McLellan's connection with the Morning Chronicle, that paper had the freshest and best written editorial page of all the dailies of our acquaintance. His appointment to an important position in the public service is a distinct loss to Canadian journalism.

The retirement of Judge Henry James Stonor at the age of eighty-five, after forty years on the County Court Bench of England, recalls the fact that his father, Charles Stonor, became a Colonel in the Spanish army, because the penal laws did not permit him to serve the King of England.

As a result of the ukase of last Easter granting religious liberty in Russia, 26,000 Poles have already left the State Church and entered the Church of Rome. In one village of 680 inhabitants, 678 did this, and the authorities of the State Church are already crying for the repeal of the ukase.

The centenary of Schiller's death has filled the reviews with laudatory articles upon him. Nevertheless the Spectator says: "As a poet Schiller's day is over. The sonorous rhetoric to which an earlier generation responded so fervently thrills us no more; we study him with respect rather than with interest; there is not a single scene, hardly a single passage, that seizes and possesses the reader."

At the Diocesan Conference held in London, England, a few weeks ago, a resolution was proposed declaring that the laws of England should forbid the remarriage in church of divorced parties except where the Bishop permitted remarriage to the innocent party. An amendment was offered making the prohibition absolute without any exception. And the amendment was carried by a vote of 160 to 71. This shows that the Church of England is awaking to the dangers of divorce.

It is four years since the insurrection in the Philippines was declared "practically ended," but there has never been any cessation of fighting, and only two weeks ago as many as forty-three insurgents were killed in an engagement with General Carter's troops. When this kind of thing was going on in Cuba, Uncle Sam said that it proved Spain's inability to govern the island. It would be just retribution if Japan should now seize the Philippines under the pretext that the Americans have shown themselves as incompetent as the Spaniards.

The Independent declares the Jesuits enjoy no mental liberty and quotes one of the Constitutions of the Society in proof of the statement. The argument would be a plausible one if it were not at variance with the facts. Undoubtedly the most conservative theologians and exegetists in the Church to-day are Jesuits; at the same time the most daring, dangerously daring, we think at times, pioneers into the land of new ideas also wear S. J. after their names. How can this be explained, if there is no liberty of thought permitted in the Society?

The Catholic Bishops of England have appointed a committee to consider the question of a uniform hymn book. The Pope is about to have a uniform catechism published. It is a pity that we could not also have a uniform prayer-book. The Book of Common Prayer is a thoroughly Catholic idea. The withdrawal of episcopal approval from thousands of prayer-books now published would mean a heavy loss to the publishers, but no reform can be effected without making some one suffer. Look at the number of women who have lost well-paid positions as choir-singers in consequence of Pius X's decree on church music.

"I am not a Roman Catholic," says a writer in Everybody's Magazine, discussing the question why the working men do not go to church. "but I venture the assertion, without fear of successful contradiction, that the Roman Catholic Church is the only Church in the land into which a poor, ragged, friendless man may go and feel that he is welcome. So far as outward appearances go, all are on the same plane in this Church, whether prince or pauper. This is one reason why this great Church has such a hold on the masses of the people, for it has always stood for the people against their oppressors."

Why does President Roosevelt not take Charles Bonaparte into his Cabinet? We asked a bright American some months ago. "Because he would put all the other fellows in the pen," was the ready reply. He has taken him in, at last, and if it be true that he intends soon to make him Attorney General, there is reason to hope that some of the beef barons at least will be put behind the bars, for Mr. Bonaparte is believed to be as dangerous an enemy of greedy corporations as the President himself; and his stern, uncompromising honesty has made him almost as much hated by the Republicans of Maryland as by the Democrats. He is using the Bonaparte brains and fighting energy to better purpose than any member of the distinguished family ever did before.

A few weeks ago the daily papers published an interview with Dr. Briggs in which he was reported to have said that the Pope talked with him quite after the fashion of the higher critics. We knew there was not a word of truth in the report, though we preferred to believe that the lying was done by the anonymous correspondent rather than by Dr. Briggs. Father Genocchi of the Biblical Commission, who presented Dr. Briggs to the Holy Father, now declares that neither he nor Dr. Briggs conversed with any journalist on the subject of the Papal audience. It is scarcely to be expected that this denial will find its way into the London or New York dailies which published the report, or into the thousands of smaller journals which copied it from them.

The recently published book on the early life of James the Second, presents positive evidence that the last of the Stuart Kings was a man of great personal courage in the days when he served with and against Turenne. This leads many to wonder with Andrew Lang on "his strange loss of the courage which he once possessed," for his conduct at the Boyne and elsewhere has been generally considered that of a coward. We have an explanation to offer which seems to fit the case, though none of the historians seem to have thought of it. King David was a man of courage yet he fled ignominiously before Absalom. That which sufficed to unnerve the hero of Israel might also suffice to make a coward of James Stuart. In the one case a father was assailed by his son, in the other by his daughter.

Theophile Delcassé is out of the French Foreign Office, and Europe no longer feels the security of peace which his presence there inspired. Kaiser William has checkmated France both in Morocco and in Abyssinia, and the French, like the Greeks, are always ready to put an unsuccessful leader to death. Nowadays, however, to send a statesman into obscurity disposes of him as effectually as sending him to the guillotine used to do. Delcassé thought he could do in Morocco what Disraeli did in Egypt, and Britain encouraged his belief. The Kaiser's spectacular landing at Tangier was treated with quiet contempt in the French Chamber, and with vociferous contempt in the London press. Nevertheless it had its effect on the Sultan, who thereupon announced that France would not be permitted to make any reforms in Morocco unless these reforms were first submitted to an international conference. Delcassé at once resigned, and Premier Rouvier says that he will never agree to such a conference. Taking this together with the German success in securing the first railway concession in Abyssinia, France feels she has been humiliated at the hands of her enemy. More humiliations than this she must suffer, in punishment of the great act of national apostasy she is now completing.

Very remarkable is St. John's account of Our Lord's discourse on the Blessed Sacrament. He not only reports the discourse in Ch. VI., but also marks carefully the effects of it upon the hearers. He divides the hearers into three classes, the Jews, the Disciples, and the Twelve. The Jews were the multitude that followed our Lord, partly out of curiosity, partly because He had fed them in the desert. They did not believe at all. "How can this man give us his flesh to eat?" they asked scornfully. The Disciples were those who believed in His divine mission, but were not constant companions like the Apostles. Their perception of His authority lessened that sense of impossibility which the Jewish multitude felt; but even to them it was a "hard saying." "Who can bear it?" they asked sorrowfully. "After this many of His disciples went back, and walked no more with Him." The twelve were the chosen companions. They all believed. "To whom [else] shall we go for the words of eternal life?" they asked faithfully, through Peter, their spokesman. "We have believed and have known that Thou art the Christ the Son of God." But even faith like this was not all He asked. He wanted purity of heart as well. Hence His reply to the Apostles: "Have I not chosen you Twelve, and one of you is a devil?"

When Mayor Weaver was elected in Philadelphia he was supposed to be an ally of the corrupt men who had been robbing the city, and prayers were offered for him in the churches. He turns out to be a champion of good government, and has fought a hard and better fight to defeat one of the vastest schemes of pillage ever attempted by municipal "grafters." The people were to be swindled of the immense sum of $100,000,000 by means of a gas lease, and if the determined opposition of the Mayor had not been aided by a social and commercial boycott directed against the immediate agents of the scheme, it would have gone through. The Independent points out, however, that the boycott did not strike high enough, and only the lesser villains felt hurt by it. The heads of the corporation which wanted the lease are some of the most prominent citizens of Philadelphia, and they had the strong support of one of the Senators for Pennsylvania. This is the most discouraging feature of the corruption which is so rife in the United States; the leading men of the country prepare the plans, and hire the low-class professional politicians to execute them. So long as these leading men continue to be honoured and esteemed, the torrent of "graft" will continue to flow. And honour and esteem they are sure to receive until religion takes its proper place in the schools of the country, and men are taught from early childhood that the laws of business must never violate the laws of God.

The result of the elections in London and North Oxford shows that Ontario is not really averse to letting religious minorities in the Northwest have such schools as their conscience demands. The Toronto press, with the exception of one journal and a half, has day after day lampooned and cartooned Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Monsignor Sbaretti with a frenzied fury and malice worthy of Lord George Gordon, is now seen to represent only Toronto. We say one journal and a half; for the Star, Sir William Mulock's organ, is the only Toronto daily which has cheerfully supported the Autonomy Bill; the Globe has done so only in a half-hearted fashion. Nevertheless the latter journal has published a few good things on the subject, as when it said: "The educationists of the West are not excited, they leave the doctrine of provincial rights to those who are concerned for it. Their concern is for educational rights." These educationists might take even a broader view, and have some concern for the rights of conscience, whose sacredness is so loudly proclaimed,—on their own behalf,—by the very men who in the name of provincial rights wish to force upon the Catholics of the Northwest a system of schools at which the Catholic conscience revolts. The Globe did well again to quote a New Brunswick educationist, Mr. G. U. Hay, the editor of the St. John Educational Review. This gentleman left New Brunswick a strong opponent of the educational clauses of the Autonomy Bill, and expected to find opposition and excitement in the West, but instead found absolute indifference or evident satisfaction. At Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Revelstoke, he could not even raise an argument. At a three days' conference of western educators, neither in public nor in private were the school clauses referred to except when Mr. Hay brought them up. At no point was he able to discover the slightest discontent.

In the old days of naval warfare a double portion of rum was served to sailors going into action. Britain and the United States have given up this custom; Russia has retained it, while Japan never had it. This may go far to explain why Togo was able to annihilate Rojestvensky's fleet so quickly. The German Emperor seems to think so, and he is the keenest and shrewdest observer of such matters in the world to-day. Whatever the advantage of alcoholic stimulation to the men who fought with cutlasses and boarding-pikes, there can be none to those whose victory must depend on their ability to sight huge guns with sufficient accuracy to destroy a ship several miles away. There are no grogrations in the American navy at all; and the regulations of the British Admiralty forbid either beer or spirits to be given to the men during battle. On board British, American and Japanese warships it is the fine old beverage beloved of hay-makers, oatmeal water, which is served to the men during an engagement. On land as well as on sea the Kaiser thinks the Russians have suffered from their drinking habits. Lord Lansdowne says the same, but we rely more upon the Kaiser's opinion, for he is a better judge and one who is friendly to Russia. Ten years ago Lord Wolseley proved that in sham fights the whiskey drinkers had less endurance than the beer drinkers, and the beer drinkers less endurance than the water drinkers. Kitchener's men, in "the man-eating Soudan," were able to cover thirty miles of sand, with empty water-bottles, under a blazing sun, because they were not allowed a single drop of grog during the campaign. If the victor of Khartoum had had his way, the same regulations would have been enforced in South Africa, and the Boers would have been beaten sooner. The Japanese troops are total abstainers; the Russians, we are told by friendly witnesses, are moderate drinkers, both officers and men. The time is fast approaching when the drinking man will be told to stand aside in every occupation of life, with that most cutting of comments upon his inefficiency: "You're not up-to-date."

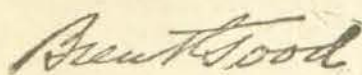

Andrew D. White is at it again. For over a quarter of a century he has laboured to show that religion in general and the Catholic religion in particular has ever been hostile to science. The particular phase of the subject which he has been discussing for the past few months in the pages of the Atlantic Monthly is the persecution exercised by Protestants and Catholics, but especially by the latter, against those who were supposed to be witches. Like all his other charges against the Church, or rather against churchmen, this contains a grain of truth to twenty grains of falsehood. Papal bulls are quoted as containing statements which do not appear in them at all, and as being published with the weight of infallibility attaching to them, when neither Catholic nor Protestant theologians,—the latter of whom, at least, Dr. White might be expected to be acquainted with,—do not give them any such weight at all. Dr. Hansen, a strongly anti-Catholic writer on the subject, and one who has made a special study of witchcraft literature, says of the famous bull of Innocent VIII, summis desiderantes: "It is evident that the Pope did not pronounce a dogmatic definition; there was no occasion for such a definition." Yet Dr. White, supposed in the United States to be a paragon of learning, declares that this bull had to be received by Catholics as infallible. Hansen does not love the Church any better than White does; but learning means something more in Germany than in the United States, and we suspect that honesty does also. Another statement of White's is that the Jesuits were the main agents in strangling and burning witches. Father Schwickerath, dealing with this statement in the current number of the Messenger, shows that the heads of the Society never sanctioned the action of those individuals who busied themselves with the suppression of witchcraft and that two of the most distinguished Jesuit theologians in Germany threw all their weight against the persecution. White does not feel equal to denying this fact, but tries to belittle its importance by saying that these two men were "silenced with ignominy and cruelty." This does not save his reputation for veracity, since it is scarcely possible that he should not know that Laymann, after the publication of the book in question, was made a professor in one of the leading Jesuit universities, while Tanner enjoyed the confidence of his brethren in the Society till his death. To make his charge against the Jesuits more acceptable to his readers, Dr. White says that they often secured the condemnation as wizards and witches of those whom they really wished to punish for heresy. Here the ex-President of Cornell disagrees with one of his former colleagues, Professor Baer, who says that a careful study of the documents does not bear out this charge. More than this, German Protestant writers admit that the Jesuits were often denounced for protecting the witches, which shows that their influence was exerted on the side of mercy. The whole discussion is of little importance at the present day except in so much as it shows once more how the enemies of the Church, in order to deliver an attack upon her with any degree of vigour, are still obliged to mingle a vast quantity of lies with a small portion of truth in a composition compared with which soft-nosed bullets, Greek fire, and other missiles forbidden by the rules of civilized warfare are lawful and innocent. The tactics of Dr. Andrew Dickson White and the tribe of which he belongs have only one parallel in material warfare; Newman named it, "poisoning the wells."

New York Herald says: Seeking to establish her claim to a $20,000,000 estate escheated for three generations by the British government in 1780, which includes a tract a mile and a half long and a half mile wide through the heart of the city of Quebec and eight acres of the famous Plains of Abraham, Mrs. Caroline Lambert Campbell, wife of Wm. Campbell, an assistant supt. of schools in Brooklyn, has engaged counsel to push her case in the Dominion and British courts.

ST. ALPHONSUS BRANCH.

Another Branch of the League of the Cross has been added to the list in Cape Breton County, which has now a total of fifteen Branches. The new Branch was organized Tuesday, May 14th, by the Grand President, Dr. D. K. McIntyre, of Sydney, assisted by the Grand Secretary at Victoria Mines, and placed under the patronage of St. Alphonsus. The Branch began with a membership of twenty-seven, mostly young men, and the following were elected and installed officers:

Spiritual Adviser, Rev. A. G. McAulay, P. P.
President, Thomas O'Neill.
Vice-Pres., Henry Petrie.
Secretary and Financial Secretary, Bernard Mullins.
Treasurer, Walter McGillivray.
Marshall, Joseph McDonald.
Asst. Marshall, Alf. Young.
Doorkeeper, James Young.

St. George's Branch at Langan, also in Father McAulay's parish, is doing well since its re-organization, and both Branches, now working harmoniously together, will do a great deal toward creating a strong temperance sentiment in the two parishes.

Col. Hierlihy's Letters.

FIRST LETTER.

My Lord:—

The disinterested benevolence which has ever distinguished your Lordship from your contemporaries—and the probability that appears of the Rebels sending off my wife and family when they find their threats not sufficient to prevent my exertions in the service of my Sovereign—together with the distress that must accrue in that case, having nothing but Major's pay to support them and myself, I imagine will plead my excuse for the liberty I have taken in writing and enclosing a memorial to your Lordship, praying for the property (on this Island) of Lt. Col. Charles Lee, now a General in the Rebel service, being transferred to me in lieu of two estates possessed by me in Connecticut and Massachusetts Bay, previous to the Rebellion—now confiscated by the Rebel States. My services last war (well known to General Lord Amherst and Major General Massey)—my losses and sufferings since the commencement of the present Rebellion together with daily expectations of my family being sent me stripped of everything and my inability to support them on my present pay, I flatter myself will induce your Lordship to think my request not altogether unreasonable—fully convinced of your Lordship's wishes to alleviate the distresses of His Majesty's Loyal subjects in America, I hope for you Lordship's favourable answer to this and the enclosed Memorial.

I have the honour to be, with the utmost respect,

My Lord,
Your Lordship's most humble and obedient servant,
(Sgd.) TIMO. HIERLIHY
Commdr. Indept. Coy.
Charlottetown, Island Saint John,
Aug. 27th, 1779.

The foregoing letter was addressed to Lord George Germain, secretary of State. The lands asked for were not granted to the applicant, on the ground that they were private property.

On May 19th, 1780, Lord Germain wrote a very sharp letter to Mr. Callbeck, administrator of the government P. E. Island, asking for information with regard to various expenditures. This letter contains the following reference to Col. Hierlihy:—

"I should also wish to learn such particulars as may be necessary for my information respecting the number and state of Col. Hierlihy's Independent companies, who were sent from New York by Sir William and arrived on the 16th July, 1778."

SECOND LETTER.

My Lord:—

I had the honour of receiving a letter from your office dated 4th November, 1779, in answer to mine respecting General Lee's land on this Island.

An extraordinary claim made by Governor Patterson obliges me to give your Lordship the trouble of this; when on the breaking out of the Rebellion in New England I was obliged either to quit the Province or take the command of a regiment in the Rebel Army, which I was often solicited to do; I with the utmost difficulty and danger found my way to New York where I was honoured with the command of the Independent Companies now in garrison on this Island. Soon after my arrival here, wishing anxiously to procure some place of retreat for my wife and numerous family of ten children, that I was under the cruel necessity of leaving behind me. I made a purchase of three of what they call pasture lots, containing twelve acres each, and afterwards on being informed that every inhabitant of the town had a right to a town and pasture lot for each of his family, I applied to Lieut. Governor Desbrisay then in the command, and obtained from him grants of town and pasture lots for myself and children, after being some months in possession of them, and laying out some money as well in clearing and cultivating as in providing materials for building a house for my family's accommodation (being in full expectation of their arrival in the spring) I still found my property much circumscribed, and in consequence availed myself of the disposition of several officers and others to part with pasture lots (which added eleven to those taken up for my family, they still reserving to themselves the building and garden ground on which they build houses—there not being even now barracks sufficient for the troops. I got these lots conveyed to me in due form of law, and had them duly recorded, notwithstanding all which Governor Patterson a few days ago summoned me with the other members of the Council here to attend him, when he demanded our giving up all the lots we had acquired by conveyance; I knew my title was good beyond dispute, otherwise there is no security for any property on the Island. Those lots were given to the original grantees, their Heirs and Assigns, under the signature of the Commander in Chief and Seal of the Island, some of which I have paid more than the real value for, before I had them assigned to me. I am exceedingly at a loss to imagine upon what principle the Governor founded this unprecedented claim of his.

There are not at present one third of the pasture lots granted, and I am certain the greatest part of the Royalty will remain a wilderness for ages. The question then is plainly reduced to this,—whether it is for the interest of the Capital that some part of the Royalty should be specifically cultivated, and of course be of service to the inhabitants, or remain quite useless. Two valuable estates of mine in New England have been confiscated and sold by the Rebels, my household goods and cattle plundered, and my wife and children drove from their house, stripped of everything but what they wore at the time—in such circumstances I was anxious to procure some peaceable retreat for them during the war and it afforded me some comfort that I had found it here in this remote place. I have even now little doubt of retaining my property but considered it my duty to lay this impartial state of my case before your Lordship and submit it to your determination whether I shall retain this trifling property or give it up.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect and esteem,

My Lord,
Your Lordship's most obedient and humble servant,

General Dealers and the Selling of Poisons.

The practice has been growing for years among general dealers of selling such articles as laudanum, hellebore, carbolic acid, tincture of iodine, muriatic acid, sulphuric acid and other articles which properly belong to a druggist's stock. These articles are poisons and their sale is surrounded by legal restrictions because of the disastrous consequences that are possible when free and careless sale is permitted. Every time a general dealer sells these articles he exposes himself to a fine; for it is not lawful for him to sell such things.

In the drug trade the nature of the articles is so thoroughly understood, that great care is exercised in handling them. They usually sell them in distinctive bottles and label them "Poison" in red letters and seem to leave nothing undone to warn the buyer that such things must be handled with caution. The average general dealer who handles them in bulk, not having the facilities of the drug trade, and not having been trained to these methods, is very apt to be less careful. For instance, he may keep them in nondescript bottles which bear absolutely no label, he depending entirely on his memory to locate or avoid them. In many cases he keeps them alongside of bottles containing such things as flavoring extracts in bulk, and perhaps the bottles and contents are very similar in appearance. It can be seen at a glance what danger to the consumer lurks here, and the danger is increased should inexperienced or thoughtless help be called upon to serve the customer. It is without question a serious menace to public safety that general dealers should handle such goods in this promiscuous fashion.

There are cases where it may be considered a hardship for general dealers to be prevented from selling such poisons, as for instance, in localities miles away from any drug store. But the danger involved is not lessened by this fact, nor the action of the dealer made the more legal. The general merchant, no matter where located, exposes himself to fines by undertaking to accommodate his customers by supplying such poisons.

We understand that the promiscuous handling of poisons mentioned above has grown to such an extent that the Pharmaceutical Society of Nova Scotia has decided to take action against those dealers who continue to disregard the law. No doubt it will exercise judgment in cases where it may be a public necessity, providing due care and intelligence in their handling is displayed; but every general dealer who handles poisons is in danger of being prosecuted and our advice would be to take care.—Maritime Merchant.

THURSDAY, JUNE 22.

SOCIAL WORK IN FRANCE.

Marc Sangnier seems to be the man of the hour in France. He has succeeded in organizing many of the young men of the country into a society called the Sillon...

A writer in the London Catholic Weekly has been telling Englishmen about the Sillon, whose methods he thinks might very well be adopted on the other side of the Channel.

We have spoken of that strange movement known as the Sillon which is spreading over France.

Mr. Chisholm is a brother of Andrew Chisholm of Antigonish Harbour, an uncle of Rev. J. W. Chisholm of St. Andrews and Rev. R. Grant of Heatherton.

Mr. and Mrs. Chisholm had but one of a family—a daughter, and she, feeling the call of God to a higher state, left house and lands, father and mother, and went to labor in the vineyard of the Lord.

Others seem to understand them, too. The Master of the Ceremonies, Monsignor Bisletti calls their leader Marc, "tout court, comme nous."

Some passers by are scandalised. An Abbe cries, "Vive le roi! (Long live the King!)" They answer with a shout of "Vive la Republique!"

We hope for great things from Mr. Sangnier and his young men. They have gone to work the right way, and if they can preserve their enthusiasm while avoiding all collision with Church or State they will provide the remedy which France needs for her national disease.

An esteemed correspondent sends the following bit of news, which reads like a description of a local gathering. It however describes an event which took place in San Francisco:

A large party of his friends visited Mr. Donald Chisholm in his home at 1191 Folsom St., Thursday, the 8th inst., to celebrate the eightieth anniversary of his birthday.

After a pleasant repast at which there was "aran coirec gu leor" as well as a sufficiency of "drunchd nam beann," a dance was set on foot or, if you wish, the feet were set to the dance.

After a short stay with her sister, Mrs. James M. McDonald, Miss Ellen Fraser returned to Hastings.

Another illness of one week Mrs. Timothy Carroll was called to her eternal reward on the 14th inst.

Another burial to-day, that of Leo Coady, son of Michael Coady, Forks. He was an industrious, intelligent and well behaved boy of only 19 years.

With the heat of the past week and recent rains, vegetation has taken a fine start, and mountains, hill sides and meadows look beautiful.

The Halifax Electric Tram Company has almost completed double-tracking on Spring Garden road, carrying the new rails out to the Bishop's chapel on Robie street.

Monsignor Bisletti calls their leader Marc, "tout court, comme nous." (Just short, like ourselves.) They sing the "Marseillaise" with the refrain.

A deplorable tragedy is reported from Plympton, a small community in Digby, N. S. On Saturday last two children, aged respectively six years and eighteen months, who had been missing, were found in the woods. Their heads were bound with cloths for the purpose of smothering them.

The eldest was dead, the youngest had managed to get a breathing space and thus saved its life. Kingsley Melanson and May Hope Young have been arrested on suspicion. They resided in the same house, the woman as house-keeper. The children lived with them. The youngest is thought to be a daughter of Mrs. Young, whose husband died in Boston a year ago.

Five hundred persons were killed in an explosion which occurred at the Ivan colliery, at Khartsisk, Russia, belonging to the Russian Donetz company.

Eighteen persons are believed to have been killed and a score were injured in a wreck on the Western Maryland railroad, near Patapaco, a small station between Westminster and Finksburg, on 17th.

The strained relations between France and Germany over Morocco continue to give rise to serious apprehension, but while openly admitting that there are real difficulties, the officials protest against this being made the basis of exaggerated reports.

Alex. Woods was found lying unconscious near the railway track at New Mills, N. B., on last Friday. He was placed on a train for Campbellton, but died before reaching there. He had several bruises about the head and body, and foul play is suspected.

His Serene Highness Prince Louis Frederick of Battenberg, with the first Channel fleet of cruisers, will cross the Atlantic during the course of next month on a cruise to New York, Halifax and Quebec, arriving in the latter port during the month of August next.

At Montreal, June 16, the first case of sunstroke for the summer occurred when owing to the excessive heat Joseph Corbeille fell unconscious on the floor in his office and expired shortly afterward. The thermometer at the time was about 88. He was about sixty years of age.

Andrew Gordon Mitchell, a bright and lovable boy of about thirteen was killed by an explosion of gunpowder at the North West Arm Halifax on 18th inst., while Gerald Grant and Ernest Twining are very badly injured, but will not recover. They had been playing with the powder, making mines and exploding them.

A despatch to the Times from Tacoma says:—Through the assistance of Jake Terry, an ex-convict, the Canadian Pacific railway has recovered securities worth $8,640, which were stolen from the safe of the Dominion Express Co., when the Canadian Pacific Overland was robbed near Mission Junction, last September.

Dr. Hannay, of St. John, has been commissioned by the archivist department to examine the old historical rolls of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island. His work is to commence early next month. It is understood he declined a permanent attachment to the staff, which necessitated his residence at Ottawa.

During the term of supreme court just closed at Digby, Mr. Justice Townsend remarked that unless there was a new court house when he came again he should engage a public hall to hold court, the accommodations of the present court room being altogether insufficient. For some years past the judges have all recommended an improvement in this line.

The strenuous life is killing off New York city's population by heart disease. The health department statistics for the week ending last Saturday show that there has been an increase of 65 deaths from this cause during the week ending June 10 of this year, and comparison of other weeks proves that the proportion has been steadily and constantly widening.

The Maritime express going north on Wednesday of last week killed three moose between Moncton and Campbellton, and the same train on Saturday morning killed two moose between Moncton and Campbellton. These moose were on the track and were struck by the trains before the engineers saw them. The conductors say that the number of moose that come on the line is surprising.

On June 16, the worst June snow-storm in Alberta's history prevailed all night all over Calgary section. Grave fears are entertained for young lambs and calves. The high wind was accompanied by heavy, wet snow between Reindeer on the north, Langdon on the east, High River on the south and Cochrane on the west. A great deal of damage has been done in Calgary, many houses and stores being flooded.

What is believed to be the greatest submarine explosion that has ever taken place occurred recently at Alexandria, Egypt. A consignment of explosives from Glasgow was being shipped to Cairo in native boats. One of the boats, on which was sixteen and a half tons of dynamite was wrecked. The explosives were recovered and taken to Aboukir, but owing to contact with the water the dynamite had generated gases, which made it a public danger. It was accordingly conveyed a quarter of a mile out into the bay from Aboukir's off Nelson's Island and sunk in fifteen fathoms of water. Then it was exploded by electricity. The sight, it is said, was one that never will be forgotten by those who saw it. The sea was perfectly calm; but all of a sudden, without any visible warning, there was a tremendous upheaval of water. The sea became a churning mass for a great distance around, and a waterspout of gigantic height arose toward the sky. The sun, shining on, or rather through, the mass, gave it a superb, glistening appearance, and produced a wonderful effect. The rising water lasted nearly two minutes. It was estimated by a technical spectator that the waterspout attained a height of two thousand feet, while its base was two hundred feet in diameter.

A decisive battle is probable within a short time, as the armies are facing each other.

Admonition.

Epitaphs often touch the casual reader; sometimes they make him smile. It is not often they make him stop and think. Among the tombs of the ancient cathedral of Lubeck, in Germany, there is a slab bearing an inscription before which the sightseer pauses and grows reflective as he reads the words cut in the gray stone.

Thus speaketh Christ, our Lord, to us:
 Ye call me Master and obey me not;
 Ye call me Light and see me not;
 Ye call me Way and walk me not;
 Ye call me Life and desire me not;
 Ye call me Wise and follow me not;
 Ye call me Fair and love me not;
 Ye call me Rich and ask me not;
 Ye call me Eternal and seek me not;
 Ye call me Gracious and trust me not;
 Ye call me Noble and serve me not;
 Ye call me Mighty and honor me not;
 Ye call me Just and fear me not;
 If I condemn you blame me not.

MARTHA MCISAAC, one of the best and most popular young ladies of Inverness Town, at the home of her parents there on Sunday evening, the 11th of June, 1905, aged 25 years. She had been in failing health since last Christmas. Her death, like her life, was strikingly edifying and peaceful. Though her illness was trying and lingering she scarcely ever complained, accepting her cross not merely with meekness and resignation to the Divine Will, but also, with a willing and rational devotion beautiful in its constancy. Mentally clear and conscious to the last moment, it is literally correct to say that her final breath was charged with the praises of her Lord and God. Her early demise was indeed a bitter blow to her aged and respected parents, and to her one surviving sister and two brothers, who were but just recovering from similar grief caused by the death of their oldest daughter and sister two years ago; but they have excellent reasons to hope that their irreparable loss is the eternal gain of their loved ones. The gloom of the sad event was not confined to the family; it distinctly pervaded the whole town in which the deceased had been for years, amiably and efficiently, conducting the Post Office. She was buried on the 13th instant in the new cemetery at Inverness. Her funeral was large and impressive. Rev. A. L. McDonald, P. P., celebrated a High Mass of Requiem which was attended by three other priests, namely, Rev. Duncan Rankin, Rev. D. L. McDonald and Rev. R. L. McDonald. After Mass the last-named reverend gentleman delivered a powerful and pathetic discourse on "death", moving many of those present to tears of tender sorrow for the departed, and subdued admiration for the speaker himself. The procession to the grave was headed by four priests. Immediately after the hearse marched, in double column, all the ladies of the Altar Society and the Children of Mary of Inverness Town, bearing the badges and insignia of their respective orders and offices. Then walked in solemn silence the vast concourse of people who came to pay their last sad respects to their friend Martha. May she rest in peace!

First Irish Parish in Ottawa.

With solemn High Mass attended by a large number of local and visiting clergy and a very large congregation the 50th anniversary, the golden jubilee of St. Patrick's parish, Ottawa, was celebrated a few weeks ago.

Rev. A. M. Leyden, of Columbus, Ohio, preached the jubilee sermon, in the course of which he said:

Fifty years ago this parish was but a little mustard seed, as some of you have lived to tell. To-day by the blessing of the Divine Husbandman, it is a wide-spreading and lofty tree, and thousands of God's Irish children come and dwell in the branches thereof, and so God's work goes on. "This is a day which the Lord hath made. Let us rejoice and be glad in it." Yes, we are all jubilant to-day.

I fancy myself standing 300 years ago, on Parliament Hill, and looking down the old grand river. A canoe is coming around the bend and sturdily breasting the current. Its most distinguished passenger is a proud scion of the nobility and Catholicity of France. His name is Samuel de Champlain. He moors his craft below the Chaudiere Falls. He raises the standard of the fleur-de-lis, and the first white man known to history sets foot upon the future seat of the capital of Canada.

His chaplain at once becomes our first Indian missionary, and plants without delay the little mustard seed amongst the natives and in this blessed land it has been watered with the blood of a Lalemant, a Brebeuf and a Fafard, and has grown into a glorious tree so that God's children of the forest have come and dwelled in the branches thereof.

As the panorama unfolds itself before me, I see more ships setting sail from St. Malo, "beau port de mer," and I see Normandy and Brittany sending her hardy mariners in thousands to found the cities of Quebec, Three Rivers and Montreal. And from every ship that reaches port I see the French missionary go ashore to plant that little mustard seed which has long been a magnificent tree, and millions of French Canadians have come and dwelt in the branches thereof. I see these sons of Brittany man the canoes of the fur companies and outdo the Indian at hunting the deer, the bear, the fox, the mink, on land and lake and river from St. Ann's at Athabasca. In another 100 years they will fight and die with Montcalm on the Plains of Abraham. One hundred and fifty years of Canadian history have passed before my eyes. The Treaty of Paris is signed. It is the year of grace, 1763, and the Canada of Champlain becomes like the territory south of us, another colony of England.

Perhaps 'twas better so, for another 25 years would have seen the colonists escape the tomahawk of the Iroquois to fall on the imported guillotine of the French Revolution and the young French Church in Canada might have fared as badly as the old French Church in France.

I look again across the sea. Every ship that sails from Londonderry, or the Cove of Cork, is carrying thousands of Ireland's sons who are fleeing from English misrule in their native land, to the 13 colonies south of us, till they form one-half of Washington's army there, and under such Irish leaders as Patrick Henry, Chas. Carroll of Carrollton, Saucy Jack Barry, Mad Anthony Wayne and Richard Montgomery, they help raise the stars and stripes, and signally avenge their persecuted faith and country. Another Treaty of Paris. It is 1783.

From that great republic I see shrewd Yankees turn covetous eyes on our seal-skins, our fisheries, our valuable timber lands. They will yet harness the tremendous water-power of our Chaudiere Falls.

In the meantime Catholic Ireland was being rapidly depopulated. In the first half of the last century hundreds of thousands went into voluntary exile and took to foreign shores their love of the faith and fatherland. The unoffending people, who were told in the 17th century to go to hell or to Connaught, were told in 1831 and 1846 to go and die of famine and fever at home, and they died by hundreds of thousands at home, thousands of others were packed in the fever ships and sent adrift upon the Atlantic to find a grave at the bottom of the sea or shelter with the hospitable French of Quebec.

O God! You laid the foundations of your Church in the blood of 300 years of martyrs! You must have built grandly with a 700 year stream of the noble blood of Irish exiles! Aye! You built the kingdom of Heaven with it even in cruel England. You built in Australia, in the United States and in Canada. You built with it St. Patrick's of Quebec, St. Patrick's of Montreal, St. Patrick's of Halifax, St. Patrick's of Toronto, St. Patrick's of Hamilton, St. Patrick's of Newfoundland. You built with it St. Patrick's of Baltimore, Chicago, Cincinnati, Dubuque, Milwaukee, New Orleans, Oregon City, Philadelphia, St. Louis and San Francisco. You built St. Patrick's in 50 of the 88 episcopal cities of the United States. And you built with it the greatest temple of the Western Hemisphere, St. Patrick's of New York. Where is the land that is not filled with our labor? Aye! Blessed Redeemer! You build well! With the priceless blood and treasure of these exiles, you built St. Patrick's here. In 1847 Father Guigues, the Ogdé Missionary, was consecrated our first Bishop. Many of us had not then been born.

Finding the Irish sufficiently numerous in Upper Town he purchased for $200 a little Methodist church on Sparks street. He dedicated it to God and St. Andrew, appointed the scholarly Father Dawson its first pastor in 1855, and thus 50 years ago, a successor of the Apostles canonically established this parish. Wherefore we to-day celebrate our golden jubilee.

There must be many of us here to-day whose earlier years were spent in other portions of the dear old diocese of Bytown. To them it may give pleasure, as it does to me, to recall the days when the sons of the first Irish settlers in this valley enlisted as the French had done before them, in the service of our great lumber companies.

How many a time and oft at some well remembered spot along the Upper Ottawa, we sat at eventide upon our fathers' door step, hard by the river bank in days gone by, and gazed with admiration upon scenes of moonlight splendor such as no artist has ever yet transferred to canvas. "Our heavens showed forth the glory of God, and our firmament declared the work of his hands." And our hearts, if not our lips, repeated the Canticle of Daniel, "All ye works of the Lord, bless the Lord; O ye heavens bless the Lord; O ye stars, O ye nights and days, O ye mountains and hills, O ye seas and rivers, bless the Lord." And "oft in the stilly night ere slumber's chain had bound us," there came to our enraptured ears from the rafts that floated by, the songs of sunny France, which the trappers once sang to the rhythmic stroke of paddles on canoe, or the plaintive strains of the Irish E.iles' Lament and the melodies of Moore.

Those were the reckless and daring lads, the flower of Irish manhood, who spent their winters in the woods and their summers on the river, who made their peace with God at the feet of the missionary and who never failed to give the good Father a substantial contribution towards the building of the fine churches of Temiscamingue, Mattawa, Hull, Maniwaki and the grand Basilica of Ottawa.

Those were the lads that feared none but God and loved our Blessed Lady. As their rafts would near the Chaudiere they would raise their eyes with more than knightly courtesy to her gilded statue on the Cathedral, and ask her who saved the world to save them from the awful vortex of the falls.

Many of us remember well the days of long ago when the Venerable Bishop Guigues, with his faithful Father Malloy, made his pastoral visitation of the parishes of our childhood. How gladly our fathers went many miles to meet him, what "Caed Mille Failthes" they gave him, and with what joy they presented us to receive from his holy hands our first communion and the holy oils of Confirmation! These men brought to the land of their adoption good citizenship and prosperity. Most of them now sleep in honored graves in the shadow of the churches which they built.

In the light of these considerations, there comes to us, does there not? a sense of gratitude to the Divine Will "that shaped our ways, rough hew them as we did," there comes a feeling of regret for many a wasted opportunity to garner wisely for the winter of our years.

The Doctor's Prescription.

"I don't know what to do about my daughter Lucy," said a perplexed mother who had come to an outspoken but kindly old physician for advice. "She seems so listless, and does not seem to have any interest in life, and she's so irritable at times. I don't think she has exercise enough, and I want to know what you think about sending her to a gymnasium or to a dancing school. She is tired of her bicycle, and the lawn tennis season is past. What would you advise?"

"How old is she?" asked the doctor. "Nearly nineteen."

"Can she cook?" "Oh, no; she knows nothing about cooking."

"Can she sweep?" "No; my maid does all the sweeping."

"Does she take care of her own room and make her own bed?" "No, I do that. Her room is next to mine, and I've always attended to that."

"Does she have any part whatever in the household duties?" "No, I cannot say that she has."

"No duties, no responsibilities, no sense of obligation, no part in the work to be done in every household?" "Well, no."

"Then, madam," said the doctor frankly, "your daughter has no need of a gymnasium in which to expand her pent-up energies. I don't wonder that she is irritable and unhappy."

"What would you advise?" asked the mother, weakly.

"I would advise you to make her feel she has a part and a place in your home life; that its duties must be borne by all members of the family in common, and that she must do her part toward contributing to the general comfort of the home. A girl of her age with no home duties, no responsibilities or interest in her home needs more than a gymnasium or a dancing school to make her helpful and happy."

I keep a bottle of it in my room as I have had several attacks of colic and it has proved to be the best medicine I ever used." Sold by all druggists.

Soon after Judge Tillinghast of the Supreme Court of Rhode Island had been appointed he went down into one of the southern countries to sit for a week. He felt glad at the appointment. He was satisfied with himself. Life seemed well worth living. "Mary," he said to the Irish waitress at the hotel where he had staid all week, "you've been in this country how long?" "Two years, sir," she told him. "Do you like it?" "Sure, it's all well enough if you like it," she answered. "But, Mary," the judge continued, "you have many privileges in this country which you'd not have in Ireland. Now at home you would never be in a room with a justice of the supreme court and chatting familiarly with him." "But, sure, sir," said Mary, dead in earnest, "you'd never be a judge at home."

It has never failed to relieve in any case where I have recommended it; and grateful mothers, after using it, are daily thanking me for advising them." This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

How to Obtain Power.

Few persons exist who do not desire power in one or other of its various forms, and the dreams of the majority dwell for the most part on that undoubted power which comes from the possession of vast wealth.

The task may at first appear hopeless, and may even, after some failures, be abandoned in despair and disgust; but this will not happen if a beginning be made with little things, and the moral of the bundle of faggots kept well before the mind.

So many and various are the qualities that go to form the harmonious whole of a really good and worthy character that to keep up to the required standard—to come within even measurable distance of perfection—daily, never-ceasing effort will be necessary.

What a happy world this would be if every individual considered the necessity, the beauty, the utility of cultivating his character on good and virtuous principles!

Readers of The Outlook interested in the labor question will recall that one of the frequent sources of friction between employers and laborers in great corporations whose works are situated at a distance from the trading centers has been the "company store."

"Company Stores" of the Right Kind.

Readers of The Outlook interested in the labor question will recall that one of the frequent sources of friction between employers and laborers in great corporations whose works are situated at a distance from the trading centers has been the "company store."

About two years ago, through the death of Herr Krupp, of Germany, the company learned of the scheme of Herr Krupp for the division among employees of the profits of the stores of the company of which he was the head, and at once the system was introduced by the Vermont concern into its three stores.

employees were formed to assist in the management of the business, and it was determined to turn the entire profits of each store over to the employees trading at these stores, in proportion to their purchases.

A Viking Wedding. The forthcoming marriage of Miss Augusta Bellingham to the Marquis of Bute, at Castle Bellingham, Ireland, is going to be, weather permitting, a most picturesque affair, and above all things a "Scotch wedding."

Memories of the Vikings of old will be recalled, for Lord Bute has chartered a steamer in which he will carry his fair bride away to the land of the Scots.

According to present arrangements the little village of Castle Bellingham, in County Louth, is to be devoted to merrymaking and festivities on a scale hitherto unknown in its annals during the week of the nuptial ceremony.

The wedding takes place on Thursday, July 6, while the many friends and relations of the happy pair are to be invited to a garden party on the preceding Tuesday, the 4th.

On reaching the seashore at Annagassan the newly married pair will receive a final hearty send-off from the tenants of Castle Bellingham estate who will be gathered there.

At the head of the procession of boats, which are to be painted white, is to be the barque containing the bride and bridegroom, manned by rowers attired in white trousers and jerseys, and crimson caps embroidered with the Bellingham arms.

The wedding will take place at the Roman Catholic parish church, Kilsaran, and the ceremony is to be performed by the Rev. Patrick Fagan, the parish priest, assisted by his curate the Rev. P. Murtagh.

The evening will see much merrymaking, and a pyrotechnic display has been arranged to take place at Castle Bellingham and bonfires will be lit on the neighboring hills.

Who Owns the Churches in France?

In view of the coming obliteration of Catholicity from once Catholic France this question of ownership has to be answered. The victim is already down and the highwaymen are quarrelling for his clothes.

The Socialist members of the Government say that even if this property is taken there is no harm done, because the former owners are made joint proprietors of what is henceforth held to be common property.

ANYONE CAN BUILD A FLOUR MILL and equip it with what is ordinarily known as modern milling machinery, and perhaps, if they have the experience and the millers, they can make as good a flour as Royal Household, up to the point where Royal Household reaches the electrical process. Beyond this, no Canadian miller, at present, can go, and the result is that in Royal Household we have flour distinctly different from any other in Canada; one which any good miller or practical flour man could tell the difference in and note the superiority of, without a moment's hesitation. LOCAL ITEMS.

THE RETREAT of the Clergy of the Diocese opens in the College on Monday evening, July 31, and will close on Friday morning, August 4th.

HIS LORDSHIP BISHOP CAMERON is visiting several of the clergy of Cape Breton County (South). He will return home on Friday.

MCGILLIVRAY & MCGILLIVRAY, contractors on the Halifax & South Western Railway, are shipping a car-load of horses to-day to Liverpool, to be used at railway work. The horses were picked up in this county.

A PICNIC will be held in Turner's field, Glace Bay, on Dominion Day, in aid of the Library of St. Ann's parish. A good programme of sport has been arranged for. The other amusements usual at picnics will be provided.

THE CALEDONIA CLUB of San Francisco are offering two prizes, one of $75 and one of $50, for the two best essays in Gaelic "On the Influence of the Scottish Race in America." The essays are to be translated into English. The competition is open to residents of the United States and Canada. The contest closes on November 15th, 1905.

MR. H. S. HASTINGS of Bethel, Maine, a frequent visitor to Antigonish, for the purpose of buying sheep, is in Town, arranging for a consignment of lambs for one of the large Boston markets. The prices this year are expected to be high, judging by those now being received. Mr. Donald McDonald, of the Old Gulf Road, received $10 for three lambs this week.

VEGETATION, though now rather backward compared with other seasons owing to no growth since last week because of the cold, looks very healthy and good crops of grasses, roots and grains are hoped for. Both clover and timothy are nearly ten days later than they have been in good years. Neither have yet blossomed out. This, however, is considered an advantage owing to the growth being still short. The frost of Monday night apparently has done no great damage.

THE TOWN is using the earth now being excavated from the site of the new post office to extend College street over towards St. Ninian Street, with a view of doing away with the wooden part of the long bridge. A number of the property owners immediately west of the bridge are protesting against the work, contending that it will cause the river to overflow their premises in times of freshet to a greater extent than formerly, and actions for damages will very likely be taken.

PRESENTED WITH AN ADDRESS AND PURSE.—Rev. D. J. Rankin, curate with Rev. Fr. Tompkins, Guysboro, has been helping Rev. J. C. Chisholm, P. P., Broad Cove Chapel, in his parochial labours for several weeks. Fr. Chisholm has been unwell, but is happily recovering. On the eve of his departure for Guysboro, Fr. Rankin was presented with an address and a nice purse of money. The address referred gratefully to the valuable services rendered, to the interest all took in Father Rankin's career since boyhood, and to the wide gratification at his elevation to the priesthood.

THE ANTIGONISH COUNTY FARMERS' ASSOCIATION will hold its annual meeting at the Court House on Saturday, July 1st. HYMENEAL.—Mr. Colin McKenzie, machinist at St. F. X. College, and Miss Katie McLellan of Antigonish were united in matrimony at the chapel in St. Martha's Convent, Antigonish, Tuesday afternoon. Rev. Fr. Barry tied the nuptial knot. He was assisted by Rev. Fr. McIsaac. Mr. Allan Cameron, of the College, was groomsmen, and Miss Mary McDonald supported the bride. The happy couple were the recipients of many useful presents.

Harry B. McCurdy, formerly of this Town, was married at Sydney yesterday to Miss Farquerson, daughter of the late Rev. Alex. Farquerson.

REV. HUGH MCPHERSON, P. P., L'Ardoise, C. B., and Rev. Alex. McKenzie, who was lately ordained to the priesthood at the Propaganda College, Rome, reached Antigonish from Europe on Thursday evening of last week. Fr. McPherson remained here until Friday evening, when he renewed his journey home. Fr. McKenzie kept on to Iona, where he will take a rest as the guest of his cousin Rev. R. McKenzie, P. P., Iona. After leaving Rome, they visited England and Scotland. Fr. McPherson's health, which was somewhat impaired, is now fully restored. Fr. McKenzie visited Antigonish Tuesday.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—Mr. James Dunn of the Harbour (South Side), Ant., received a telegram from Victor, Colorado, on last Friday, conveying the sad intelligence that his son, William, had that morning fallen down the shaft of the gold mine in which he was employed, and sustained such injuries that he died in a short time. Deceased was but 24 years of age. Previous to going West, two years ago, he was engaged with Mr. T. J. Sears, of Lochaber, as driver on the mail waggons. He was a young man of industrious habits. His untimely death is widely regretted in his native County. His father have the sympathy of the community in his sad bereavement. The body will be brought home for interment. May he rest in peace.

AN OTTAWA despatch to the Halifax Chronicle of Monday last says it is probable that Mr. C. F. McIsaac, M. P., will be appointed to the Transcontinental Railway Commission as representative from the Maritime Provinces. The appointment would certainly be an excellent one; and while we believe Mr. McIsaac's constituents, almost irrespective of party, would be sorry to lose his services in Parliament where he has so long and ably represented them, they would be glad of his appointment to so important a position, where his great business capacity and practical sense would be at the immediate service of the whole Dominion. It is well known among those best informed on Parliamentary affairs that no member from the Lower Provinces outside of the Cabinet enjoys the confidence of the Government to a greater extent than the representative of Antigonish.

NEW BUILDINGS.—Work has commenced on the new post office for this Town. Mr. A. McGillivray, mason, will be the inspector during construction. It will have a frontage of 42 feet and will run back 60 feet. Mr. D. C. Chisholm, Town Treasurer, is commencing the erection of a handsome residence at the corner of Church and St. Ninian streets, which will cost $2300. Mr. John McDonald, builder, has the contract.

A LARGE NUMBER of the people of the town took advantage during the last three days of the past week of the invitation extended the public by the Sisters of Mt. St. Bernard to view the exhibits in art work executed by their pupils. All the work was highly creditable, while some of the specimens showed artistic skill of no mean order. The articles in sewing, such as aprons, shirt-waists, etc., showed the pupils are receiving good practical training in this most necessary

DEATH OF A RELIGIOUS.—On Sunday morning, June 11th, at the Mother House of the Sisters of the Congregation de Notre Dame, Montreal, Rev. Sister St. Etienne le Jeune died after an illness of several months. Known in the world as Miss M. LeBlanc, daughter of the late Captain B. LeBlanc of Arichat, C. B., she was educated at the Convent of Notre Dame of that town, and was among the first young women of this Diocese to consecrate her life to the noble work of Christian education. The greatest part of her religious career of some twenty-five years was spent at Richmond, Quebec, and at St. Ann's, Montreal. Her demise is deeply regretted, as she endeared herself to her sisters and pupils by her kindness of heart, and by her holiness of life which was one of singular sweetness and living fidelity to duty.—a due preparation for that eternal life of happiness in Heaven, which, we pray, began for her on the solemn feast of Pentecost, the day she expired. Her last days on earth were made comfortable and happy by the tender offices of her Sisters Religious, and the end came gradually, but peaceably, until the already delicate form weakened by frequent hemorrhages, succumbed to the inevitable fate of all that is human, and the dear soul of a holy Religious sought repose in the bosom of her God whom she had so faithfully loved and served. "Eternal rest give unto her, O Lord."

All are cordially invited to attend the salmon dinner to be given at Bayfield Beach in celebration of Dominion Day, July 1st. The amusements will include boating, &c. Dinner 25c. If day named be not fine, will be held on first fine day after. Proceeds will be devoted to the ornamentation of the sanctuary of the parish church.
