Conversion of "Uncle Remus."

How appropriate was it that the beautiful prayers and services of the Catholic Church should have accompanied the pure soul of Joel Chandler Harris, "Uncle Remus," to eternal happiness. He had lived in a Catholic atmosphere since that day, in 1873, when he took Miss Essie La Rose, a French Canadian, to be his helpmeet.

Long a Catholic in belief and sympathy, Mr. Harris' failure to make external and public manifestation of his adherence to the faith of his wife and six children was undoubtedly due to his extraordinary shyness, the fear of attracting the attention to himself which would have followed his attendance at Mass.

Rev. Father O. H. Jackson, of St. Anthony's Church, Atlanta, Ga., from which Mr. Harris was buried, when asked the date of his reception into the true fold, said:

"I had the pleasure of receiving Mr. Harris into the Church on June 24. I had known Mr. Harris intimately for six years, and in all that time his belief and his life was thoroughly Catholic. His retiring disposition, to my mind, was the only thing that prevented him from taking the step sooner. Mr. Harris had never been baptized in any church, but his knowledge of the truths of the Catholic faith was far greater than that of many Catholics. His favorite books were Cardinal Newman's works, and his weekly companion the Ave Maria which he always enjoyed; so that his request for baptism was no surprise to me."

Columns could be filled with stories of the extraordinary modesty of this man, who shall always live in English literature. His paper, Atlanta Constitution, said of him in its obituary: He lived all the years of a simple and shy life in the walled city of modesty. Probably no other man of his day was so widely known and so little known. Hundreds of people in the suburb where he lived had never seen him to know him. His modesty was prebital. It was the shyness of a timid, simple, unpretentious gentleman. He despised show and ostentation. He did not like to be lionized. And still no old - time Negro, no person in distress, no deserving seeker for his favor ever found him anything but kindly, interested and sympathetic. All employees on the street railway line running by his house knew and loved him. In the old days of the horsecar line he would often relieve the driver while the latter went inside to have his dinner."

When President and Mrs. Roosevelt visited Atlanta in 1906, the President specially requested that Mr. Harris should meet his train and ride with himself and Mrs. Roosevelt to the Governor's mansion. So all arrangements were made to have "Uncle Remus" meet the Roosevelts; and they were successful, owing to the fact that a special guard was kept on "Uncle Remus" to see that he did not escape. At the banquet President Roosevelt said:

"I am going to which I will repay the courtesy with which I have been greeted by causing, for a moment or two, acute discomfort to a man of whom I am very fond—'Uncle Remus. Presidents may come and Presidents may go, but Uncle Remus stays put. Georgia has never done more for the Union than when she gave Joel Chandler Harris to American literature."

When on his death-bed one of his sons had cheerily, "Father, your time has not come to be no more." With sudden seriousness, Mr. Harris replied: "My son, when a man dies, instead of saying 'he is no more,' say he is forever."

Speaking to Clark Howell, editor of the Constitution, about his father, with whom he had worked for thirty years, he said: "There was never a ripple on the strong stream of our confidence and faith in each other. But one day he slipped gently into the beautiful, where I hope to find him when my time comes to shuffle off the things that prevent us from speaking our full minds here."

Little wonder that such a shyness as Mr. Harris kept his faith hidden from the world!—S. H. H. in Catholic Standard and Times.

Sowing Poison in the Child Mind.

In the same London paper The Academy from which we take the above, is a letter from Mr. Archibald J. Dunn, which calls attention to the continued dechristianization of the schools of France. Mr Dunn cites an article published in the Paris Correspondent by M. de la Guilloniere upon the class-books used in the French primary schools at present. This article exposed by documentary evidence the false pretense of scientific impartiality put forth by its authors, and shows the steps by which the gradual dechristianization of France is being accomplished by the French lodges. The first attempt of the freethinkers to corrupt the minds of school-children was in 1880. Previous to this date the school-books set forth the duty of mankind towards God, but in the edition of the Childer's Grammar adopted in 1882, M. de la Guilloniere says:—

Instead of the verses upon the "goodness of God" which appeared in previous editions, there was substituted a poem upon "The Donkey's Flower, the Thistle." The Creator was replaced by Jupiter, and Chateaubraird's "Hymn to the Eternal" gave place to "A melodious hymn."

In 1890 further progress was made: the Masonic Lodges had declared open war against Christian doctrine and offered a prize for the composition of a lay manual of morals, the use of which should be obligatory in all the school throughout France, in opposition to the Catholic Catechism. This offer, however, did not produce any work which could be publicly avowed and adopted, so another method was tried. A series of classical textbooks were introduced into the schools which were quite free from any religious taint. On March 30, 1904, the heads of the Lodges congratulated themselves upon their success in the schools. "It is enough," they said, "to mention the works of Herve, Aulard, and Boyet to show that the school-books now used are written in a scientific and rationalist spirit."

Among the works thus praised by the avowed enemies of the Christian religion, the Correspondant refers to the "Manual of Civic Morals" of M. Bayet, of which more than 60,000 copies were used by children from six to thirteen years. M. de la Guilloniere says of this:—

We do not think that it would be possible to bring together in the same number of lessons more direct attacks against God and His ministers, calumnies, against Catholic inversions of historic truth, and hatred of France, and to display at the same time so much spurious science.

"This," comments Mr. Dunn, "is the scientific and impartial system of education which is provided by the French Government." In one lesson the pupils are taught to distinguish between things which can be known and things which can never be known.

In the second category are classed statements which can not be scientifically proved as: "For instance we know that men die, but we do not know scientifically what becomes of them after death." The same formula is repeated in the question of our knowing whether after death there is or is not another life. In regard to the existence of God the manual informs its youthful readers that we do not know of His existence and can not know of it scientifically. The book says that all these things must be classed as "unknowable." "Can it be surprising," concludes the Academy's correspondent, "that a generation of French children who have been educated upon principles such as these, have become atheists or at least skeptics and haters of religion?"—Sacred Heart Review.

Lord Lovat's Visit.

That the descendants of the Highlanders in Antigonish County still cherish the traditions of the land of their sires was very conclusively shown by the spectacle presented on Friday last. Antigonish has entertained lords before now, but it is not every day that it can boast of a visit from a real Highland Chief, to say nothing of one who is also a Peer of the Realm and a distinguished soldier. There were many historic associations to ensure a hearty welcome for the youthful chief. The name of Lovat is closely and tragically connected with the cause of the "King Over the Water," and the name of Fraser is one that has figured prominently in both Church and State in Nova Scotia. It was not surprising, therefore, that despite the fact that it was a rattling fine day—a rather rare thing just at that time—the town was crowded with people. Many remarked that, had it not been the hay making season, the town would surely not have held those who would have come.

The distinguished guest was accompanied by Sir Keith Fraser, Lt.-Gov. Fraser, Hon. C. P. Chisholm, E. Macdonald M. P., J. A. Chisholm, K. C., and Graham Fraser, Wm. Chisholm, M. P., of Antigonish went up the line to meet the party. On arrival at the station they were met by Mayor A. G. McDonald, Rev. H. P. McPherson, Rector of the College, Judge McGillivray, Hon. C. F. McIsaac, and members of the Scottish Societies.

Seldom in the history of Antigonish has such a large number of people gathered together, as did on this occasion, to extend to the Highland Chief a royal and hearty welcome. As his lordship stepped from the train, cheer after cheer was given for the chieftain, by the large concourse of people who crowded around the station. In acknowledgement Lord Lovat bowed gracefully, his action speaking louder than words. With mounted outriders the young Scottish Peer and his party drove to the residence of D. Grant Kirk, which was kindly placed at the disposal of the committee of entertainment, and where luncheon was served.

Clad in Scottish garb and to the sweet music of the bag pipes, Lord Lovat, Governor Fraser and Sir Keith Fraser, proceeded to the athletic grounds where a large crowd of people had gathered, including clergymen from several Eastern counties, to witness the Highland games which were gotten up for the occasion. Here addresses were presented to his lordship, which are given below in full.

 My LORD,—It is, indeed, with feelings of pleasure and sincerity that I have the honor, on behalf of the citizens of the Town, to welcome your Lordship amongst us. While we cannot presume to vie, even remotely, with the splendor and pomp with which you and the other distinguished personages from every part of the Empire, were recently received in the historic City of Quebec, I take the liberty of assuring your Lordship that, in no place, nor by any people, could you be received with greater cordiality, and with more genuine friendship than by the Scottish descendants of the Town and County of Antigonish. And our appreciation of the honor you confer on us is, to say the least, not lessened by the knowledge that while you were overwhelmed with invitations to visit the larger centres of population, and the metropolitan cities on this side of the water, during your brief American trip, yet, guided by the sensitive magnet of Scottish loyalty, you deemed us, however inconspicuous a position we may occupy, not unworthy of being given a foremost place in your itinerary.

We are not ignorant of the fact that yours is a long and illustrious lineage. The Charter of your lands was comparatively old before Columbus ever sighted the shores of America; and history tells us not only of the valor of your people in asserting national rights, whether fighting in the van, under the Lion of Scotland, or the Union Jack; but it also tells us that among your predecessors in the Chieftainship of the great Clan Fraser were men deemed worthy to occupy positions in the State, second only to that of the regal one itself. The large concourse of people that you see around you here to-day have come from far and near to celebrate your Lordship's visit. There are among them clansmen and kinsmen from the beautiful shore districts of Morar, Arisaig, Moidart, Knoydart and Lismore. The fertile meadows and valleys of Beaulieu, Loch Katrine, Clydesdale, Stratmore, Lanack, Dunmaglass and Ardness send their quota. Salwart sons of Keppoch, Morven and Eigg Mountain are also here to welcome you, and classic Saint Andrews is largely represented by her loyal sons. And when I add that there is scarcely a clan name in the Scottish Highlands that may not be found in the Town of Antigonish to-day, may it not be truthfully said that you have here, in this part of America, in miniature, an excellent reproduction of your native Highlands. And I do trust that your Lordship will not infer that the old stock has, in anywise degenerated on this side of the Atlantic in courage, enterprise or physique, when I say that here these clansmen dwell in unity and peace and brotherly love, with scrupulous regard for the rights of neighbors and of one another. Very few of them indeed can claim old Scotland as their place of birth. But cradled and nursed and reared by devoted parents, now no more, in the speech and customs, in the story and song and tradition of their loved Highland homes, it is doubtful that, in any part of the world, can there be found hearts that pulsate in truer and more sympathetic unison with those of their kinsmen across the water, than can be found here. We believe that our forbears from the Scottish Highlands were the bravest and best colonizers that ever came from Europe to America. Living for generations in their native land, under the stern laws and hard conditions of the age, but with abiding faith in the precepts of the Gospel, they were unconsciously, even in their oppression, being prepared for their great work on this continent. They have left the impress of their intelligence, endurance, industry, resourcefulness, fidelity to duty, and scrupulous honor, in their dealings, on every part of this North American continent, from Darien south to Hudson Bay north, and from the wilds of Labrador east to distant Vancouver west. Whether exploring the unknown regions of the Fraser River, on its way to the Pacific, or the great MacKenzie in its perilous course to the Arctic Ocean, their indomitable courage and their intelligent resourcefulness became the admiration of the world.

In this great Dominion of Canada, and under the glorious British flag, it is our happy lot to enact our part in a manner not unworthy of such sires. And, though we cannot hope to play as prominent a part in shaping the destiny of the great Empire to which we have the privilege to belong, as your Lordship has recently done on the African veldt, yet all our aspirations and efforts shall be for its greater glory and stability.

In conclusion, my Lord, I beg again to welcome you to our Town with a hearty Scottish "caed mille failthe."
 A. G. MACDONALD,
 Mayor of Antigonish.

To the Honourable Simon Fraser, Lord Lovat, Sixteenth Baron, C. V. O., D. S. O.

The Highland Society of Antigonish is proud of this opportunity of extending to your Lordship a most hearty welcome.

When your visit among us was spoken of as a possibility, it was felt that the Highland County of Antigonish would have an opportunity to strengthen those kindred ties that have always existed between Scotchmen of the old world and of the new. Your Lordship would be surprised if you could realize the depth of feeling and the attachment which exists for the old land, in the hearts of our people. The Highland Society for the last forty years, has endeavored to foster and strengthen those sentiments and it is therefore, indeed, a proud privilege to have in our midst a Scotchman so representative and one for whom we have so much reason to be proud. We well remember what a thrill of pride was felt in Scottish hearts, when it was learned that your Lordship would equip and command a troop of cavalry for South Africa from your own estates. Our pride was intensified at the well merited honors your Lordship received for such distinguished services.

Let me assure you again, my Lord, of the pride we feel in your visit among us. We shall not forget it soon. We trust that you will bear a message for us to the land of our fathers. That message is one of affection and loyalty. Our heartfelt wish is that the ties that have hitherto bound us, will become stronger, and that the best traditions of the old land will long be perpetuated in the new.
 W. F. MACKINNON,
 President Highland Society.

Antigonish, N. S., July 31, 1908.
To the Honourable Simon Fraser, Lord Lovat, Sixteenth Baron, C. V. O., D. S. O.
 May it please Your Lordship:—

The officers and members of Clan Chisholm, No. 179 of the Order of Scottish Clans, desire to extend to your Lordship a cordial and Highland welcome to the Town and County of Antigonish, on this, the occasion of your first visit to the land of adoption of so many of Scotland's sons and daughters.

When it was announced some time ago that you were to be present at the celebration at Quebec, the members of Clan Chisholm, in common with Highlanders throughout the County, scarcely hoped, owing to the many calls on your time, that you would be able to visit our County. Hence it is that the pleasure we experience today is intensified when we consider the fact that you have doubtless been obliged to decline invitations to places of greater pretensions than Antigonish. We regret indeed that your visit must necessarily now be a short one and we are thus deprived of the opportunity of extending to your Lordship a more fitting Highland welcome.

Your record as a true and chivalrous Scotsman and loyal British subject is well known to all of us and we have watched your career with feelings of national pride. Your patriotic action in raising and commanding the famous "Lovat Scouts" when Britain's prestige was threatened by the Boers, was sufficient of itself to make you famous. But to those of us who are conversant with the history of the Frasers, your military career is only such as would naturally be expected of the Chief of such a brave and illustrious Clan. Recollections of the gallant deeds of our ancestors at Louisburg and again on the historic Plains of Abraham, are especially treasured in the hearts of all true and loyal Canadians.

It is, therefore, with a great deal of pardonable pride and pleasure that we, the members of this branch of the Order of Scottish Clans, whose aim and purpose is to preserve and foster the traditions of our noble Highland forefathers, today welcome as Chief of Clan Fraser and as an honored and representative Scotsman.

Permit me, in conclusion, my lord, in behalf of Clan Chisholm, to again tender you a hearty welcome; and we trust that you may carry back with you to the land of the "heath and the heather" many pleasant memories of this, your first visit to Nova Scotia.

D. C. CHISHOLM,
 Chief of Clan Chisholm, No. 179.

Lord Lovat, in reply, expressed his great pleasure in visiting Antigonish, the home of so many descendants of clansmen and kinsmen. He thanked the societies for their greetings and in reference to his services in South Africa, he gave the chief credit to the Highlanders who enlisted on that occasion.

Perhaps the most important event connected with Lord Lovat's visit here was the conferring on him of the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws by the University of St. Francis Xavier's College. The President of St. F. X. had previously ascertained that his Lordship would be glad to accept such a degree. Accordingly at 4.30 p. m. on Friday last, Lord Lovat and party, after having called on Bishop Cameron, accompanied the latter to the University buildings. They were met at the gateway by the President, Dr. H. P. MacPherson, the Vice-President, Rev. James J. Tompkins, and other members of the Faculty. Thence all proceeded to the Library where Lord Lovat and Sir Keith Fraser were introduced to all of the professors who were able to attend. Thence all proceeded to the Convocation Hall, a portion of which had been partitioned off and decorated. Among the decorations, the coat of arms of the Lovat family, encircled with an elegant specimen of the Fraser tartan, occupied a conspicuous place.

Our venerable Bishop, as the Chancellor of the University, conferred on the distinguished visitor the degree of Doctor of Laws ("honoris causa") prefacing it with a preliminary address. Notwithstanding his advancing years, Bishop Cameron's voice was clear and strong. He made appropriate allusion to the historic house of Lovat, which has for about four centuries been the recognized head of the ancient Fraser clan. He also made fitting reference to the high personal character of the present Lord who is the 16th Baron of the House of Lovat, and to his career as a student in the sequestered retreat of the Benedictines at Fort Augustus, and in the classic halls of Magdalen College in old Oxford, as well as to his military life as an officer of three different regiments and as the commander of the Lovat Scouts in South Africa—an admirable body of mounted infantry raised by Lord Lovat himself on his own estates to help in maintaining the rights and prestige of our Empire on the "Dark Continent." Finally the Right Rev. Chancellor told of the pleasure it afforded him to declare Simon Joseph Fraser, (Lord Lovat) a Doctor of Laws of this University, and in perpetuum an honorary member of its Faculty. The new Doctor of Laws in a few brief but graceful remarks acknowledged the honor conferred on him by the University, and received the congratulations of Lieut.-Governor Fraser and other friends. He then signed the Registrar of the University as a graduate and as an honorary member of its Faculty. At his request his Lordship was escorted through the principal classrooms and other apartments of the university by the Rev. Dr. MacPherson.

It may be said with simple truth that his Lordship charmed all who came in contact with him here. He gave the impression of a man who needs not broad estates nor a long line of distinguished ancestors to raise him above the commonplace. Simple, affable and unaffected, genial and considerate, and of evident force of character, the young man who is the Sixteenth Baron Lovat would doubtless have been heard of even had he begun life in the ranks. He has yet, in the ordinary course of events, a long life before him, and it is a safe prediction that if he is spared to live it, he will leave behind a name that will not be the least distinguished in the long line of chiefs of the historic house of Fraser. He bears with him the best wishes of the people of Antigonish, who cherish the hope that, as he has made himself an advocate of more intimate relations between Canada and the Mother Country, he may yet be seen many times in our midst.

Completely exhausted, having been without food or water for two days, two Gloucester fishermen who had strayed away from their vessel, were picked up by the Spanish training ship Nautilus and brought to Halifax Friday. The rescued men are: Neil Hawley, who belongs to Cape Breton; Alfonso Nansen Hawick, hailing from Gloucester. Both the men belong to the Gloucester fishing schooner Senator, and became lost from their ship in a dense fog early last week.

The Board of Conciliation between the N. S. Steel & Coal Co., and its workers at Sydney Mines has reported, and the report is adopted by the men and by the Company. The change made in wages consists in a readjustment, wages being reduced in one section and increased in another. There is a slight increase in some ranks independently of the amount saved by the decrease, which latter amount goes to swell the fund from which the increase will be paid.

The language clauses in the new educational bill in Cape Colony, give the fullest scope for a revival of racial strife. Many English people will be compelled to send their children to schools where Dutch is the sole medium of teaching, and there is little doubt that the provisions regarding the equality of the Dutch and English languages will involve the dismissal of many English teachers. A desperate resistance is being offered to the measure, which has aroused the deepest resentment.

Mrs. Taft on Divorce.

It is with great pleasure that we note that Mrs. Taft, the wife of the Republican candidate for the Presidency, and who some day may be "the first lady of the land," has pronounced views on the divorce evil which are in accordance with the teachings of the Catholic Church.

"If it were in my power, divorce would be stopped entirely. Of course, there are cases where separation might be legally granted, but there should be no remarriage allowed. The laxity of our divorce laws is a menace to the very moral fibre of our nation."

This is the language of a good Christian and a good American. Mrs. Taft, like every good and true woman, feels her soul revolt at the shocking and horrid spectacle of men and women treating matrimony as a temporary union which may be dissolved for the most frivolous reasons.

The Clerical "Scandals" in Italy.

Some time ago there appeared in a London Nonconformist publication entitled 'The Christianian,' an article by a certain Rev. A. Robertson, D. D., dated Venice. This gentleman undertook in the said sheet to show the extent to which immorality abounded in the monasteries, convents, religious institutions, orphanages, and even secular presbyteries of the Italian peninsula. Naturally enough, with the columns of Nonconformist 'Christianian' open to him as wide as might be, this gentleman availed himself of his opportunity to place before the Nonconformist public such a mass of prurient detail as it had not, for many a long day enjoyed at the expense of what the British Nonconformist terms the 'Romans.'

With that strange, but really questionable simplicity that characterizes opponents of the Catholic Church, when they attempt to read her, Mr. Robertson looked, when in Venice, for his facts in what were and are admittedly the bitterest anti-clerical organs of the peninsula. He may have known, or he may not have known, that there is at the present moment in progress in Italy, a fanatical anti-Catholic propaganda which has been traced unmistakably to its source in the dove-cotes of Freemasonry; has been subsidized by the money of Freemasons; is wholly engineered by Freemasonry, and, like the similar movement in France which eventually led to the closing of the religious institutions, and the disestablishment of the Church, is sanctioned by the anti-clerical factions among the governing authorities.

Mr. Robertson gives a list of twenty-seven specific charges of the grossest kind. It will be remembered that in the early part of the French Church crisis, an especial propaganda was set in motion in the venal press of France, and that many a 'largest circulation' French sheet, simply because day the vilest obscenities and the most abominable charges against defenceless priests and nuns were made by the lowest type of newspaper rats, and eagerly devoured by 'the politest and most chivalrous people in Europe.'

As in the American Catholic Quarterly Review, the Very Rev. J. Hagan, of the Irish College, Rome, investigates in a very impartial way the whole accusation. He brings to his enquiry a cool method of reasoning of which not many such good Catholics would be capable, in view of the obvious exaggerations or ignorance of Mr. Robertson. Above all, Father Hagan disproves, of the twenty-seven specific charges, every single charge, and shows that the better classes, of Italian journals themselves admitted the falsity of the attacks; and that where charges were upheld, it was shown and proved, beyond cavil or dispute that the so-called religious guilty of crimes against youth were masqueraders in religious garb without commission or charter from any ecclesiastical authority to open or conduct any religious, or educational institution.

As in France, Hagan says, quoting Luther: 'The good priests more than counterbalance the bad; unworthy monks are honored because of the worthy. But here we have thoughtless men rising up against the entire body as if they themselves were pure and stainless, whereas, interiorly and exteriorly, they are nothing better than a common market and exhibition of hogs and sows.' - New York Freeman's Journal.

supper, I followed the lay brother to the visitors' parlor, with its bar walls and simple furniture, where, after a minutes' waiting, I was joined by Abbot Gasquet, the directing spirit of this great undertaking, who kindly allowed me to see him in order that he might explain to me something of what is to be done, and how it is to be accomplished. Dom Gasquet began by saying that the Vulgate revision is a work that is very near and dear to the heart of Pius X., who, indeed, had impressed upon him that neither time, labor nor money was to be spared to render it as scientifically correct as possible. "It is an almost appalling task to set an old man of sixty-two," said the abbot, smiling, through his robust physique and keen, alert eyes are more like those of a man ten or twelve years younger, "and I cannot hope to see it accomplished in my lifetime. I expect to do little more than organize it all, and I hope to arrange to break up the work into divisions, so that perhaps in the course of the next three years the revision of the Psalms or the Pentateuch might be brought to completion."

"What I should like people to realize is the immensity of the task that we have undertaken. No results will be obtained in a hurry. What we have to do is to gather together and collate all the known and unknown copies of St. Jerome's great translation of the Sacred Writings up to those of the eleventh century. They divide themselves into great families, each with its special variations, peculiarities and mistakes, that resemble each other. The great 'Gallicana' version is that which is now universally adopted in the Catholic Church, with the one exception of St. Peter's in Rome, where the canons use the 'Roman' version. I hope eventually to make a complete list of all the known versions, but for our own purpose about fifty of the best and most correct copies will be used for guidance and comparison. Some of the finest are of Saxon origin, as, for example, the Alcuin copy, which is to be found in the Vallicelliana Library, in Rome, and the Codex Amiatinus, now in the Laurentian Library, in Florence, which has a most interesting history. It was one of three copies made in the great monastery of Jarrow, from which St. Bede came, and the Abbot Ceolfrid left the monastery with one of the copies, which was to be presented to the Pope. The abbot died on the journey, and the great codex was entirely lost sight of."

St. Bede had quoted certain lines from the dedication of this copy, and De Rossi, the great Roman Christian archaeologist, discovered that part of the dedication of the Codex Amiatinus had been erased, and under the writing that was superposed he was able to decipher words that indisputably proved it to be the long-lost copy from Jarrow. This codex is probably the best and nearest to St. Jerome of all that have come down to us."

Abbot Gasquet then gave me some idea of the vast amount of expert knowledge and patient labor that is at the command of the commission over which he presides, in the members of the Benedictine order, and of the exceptional access which their position gives them to places in which valuable manuscripts may be found. "If the unpaid labor of love that we shall provide," said the abbot, "had to be paid for even at the most modest rate, the expense of the work would be almost prohibitive; but such work as ours cannot be had for nothing. Travelling and other expenses will have to be provided, and when the Holy Father asked me what I thought the cost of the work would be, I said that even on our economical lines the annual expense could not be less than $1,000, and might easily be more."

I have already had many letters of sympathy and offers of expert help, and some money both from America and England, which has been very welcome and encouraging, and I hope is only an earnest of more to come. My life will be entirely given up to the task, and I shall spend many months of the year in Rome, though I hope eventually to have three other chief centres—in Paris, London and Madrid. Here in this college the Pope has kindly allowed me to have any manuscripts however valuable, that I need from the Vatican Library, and the assistance that it is to work in one's own study with manuscripts and papers spread round one on all sides is quite incalculable."
