

The London Tablet's Analysis of The Revolution in Portugal.

Things are what they are; and their consequences are what they must be—and why should we seek to be deceived? The familiar words come back to us as we read of the harvest of revolution which is reaped to-day from the seeds of assassination which were sown two years ago.

in Portugal, once established, will stimulate a similar revolution across the frontier; but that is no concern of any other country. A Republic has come to Portugal and will stay there, because the Portuguese people wanted it; it will come to Spain—if and when the people of Spain want it.

Learned Jurist Replies to Minister.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 20.—Justice Peter A. Hendrick of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, one of the speakers at the banquet of the Knights of Columbus, held in honor of Columbus Day in this city last week, made a passionate and eloquent answer to the diatribe against the Catholic Church of Rev. Mr. Aked, the minister imported from England two or three years ago for Rockefeller's church on New York's Fifth Avenue.

While declaring at the outset of his address that Mr. Aked's opinions were without value and not worthy of a reply, Justice Hendrick pointed out the impropriety of an English minister (a very recent importation) attacking American Catholics in their own land.

THE DEBT OF THE REPUBLIC. "It may not be out of place at this time to recall to the minds of the public, regardless of creed, the great debt which this country and its people owe to the Roman Catholic Church. We may with pride recall the achievements of the Roman Catholics in the discovery, the settlement and the up-building of this country.

Regarding the charges by Mr. Aked of decadence in the Catholic Church in America, Justice Hendrick said: "It may be remembered," he said, "that a governor of the Catholic Colony of Delaware, himself a Catholic, enforced the law that all men were to be permitted to worship God according to the dictates of conscience and the same thing occurred in our own New York, when the same law was enforced by the colony's first Catholic governor."

A COMPLICATED ENGLISH JOKE. "It is not necessary to speak of the charges of decadence made by Mr. Aked. That must have been one of those well-d, complicated English jokes, the humor of which cannot be grasped by the ordinary mind. There is to-day no more valuable or more potent force in the United States than the Catholic Church. The vitals of our beloved country is threatened by Socialism, but there is no force so powerful against that evil than the Catholic Church. Divorce, which is eating at the very heart of our republic through its destruction of the home, is being fought to the death by the Catholic Church.

Regarding the relation between labor and capital, there is no power that can so honestly regulate them as the Roman Catholic Church. It is the strongest asset this republic possesses. "No, Mr. Aked, the Catholic Church is not disloyal nor is she opposed to liberty. Catholics cherish the flag in the sanctuary of the heart, where they were it at Shiloh, at Gettysburg, at Fredericksburg and, in fact, in all those bloody struggles which marked the dark days of the early sixties. Catholics love the flag because its folds are broad enough to protect all creeds and all nationalities, because it allows all men to worship God as their conscience dictates.

"No man from any other country can instill in the minds of our countrymen any shadow of a doubt regarding our loyalty. The Catholic American can say: 'Have I not borne my part in the great endeavor of this republic? Have I not given freely of my valor, of my intelligence and of my conscience to found a nation where all religions may find a home?'"

In the last twenty-five years the lower settlement has made great progress in better organization, in more comfortable buildings, in a general air of general prosperity, and less of the makeshift, and in the all-prevailing spirit of contentment and resignation.

Terrible Expose of Hospital Scandals in France.

Two members of the Board of Administration of the public hospitals of Lorient have resigned, writes the special correspondent of the London and Liverpool Catholic Times.

In this great seaport the nursing Sisters have been replaced by lay attendants. Monsignor Tanguy, one of the ex-administrators, thus justified his resignation:

"I resign because everything is going badly in our hospitals, especially the female nurses. These have gone so far that not one of the administrators dares give them an instruction. Last year, seeing their disgraceful conduct, I asked that they should be sent away. I could obtain no reply from my colleagues. Disorder reigns in every department, and I can no longer countenance such waste of the patrimony of the poor."

M. Tanguy then read some letters relating certain scandals. The Mayor begged him not to continue. His fellow ex-administrator said:

"I do not resign as a protest against any one particular scandal. The scandals are continuous, and each time that we have wished to complain we have been met by the most determined opposition. When the sick complain, no notice is taken. On New Year's Eve the attendants were drinking till very late. No linen for the use of the sick; the food ill-prepared; the lay attendants drink the wine themselves, and make up with water for the sick."

Over and over again the same complaints have been made, drawing attention to the same state of things in many different towns.

The Gaulois relates that the resignation of the two Lorient town councillors has led to the most extraordinary revelations, and has thoroughly aroused public indignation. To the perfect order, economy and loving care of the religious, had succeeded a pandemonium. For the first year of office (1905) of the governmental accountant, the inspector reported irregularities. No notice was taken of the government. Next year the inspector reported appropriation of public funds. No notice was taken. Next year the inspector reported robberies, falsification of accounts, rascalities of every kind. Still the government and the Board of Administration remained blind. But now, at last, through the determined action of the two councillors, all comes out. Where all were afraid to speak, complaints arise on every side. Not only did the unfortunate patients lack milk, wine, medicine, nursing and attention, but even their own possessions were stolen—their clothes, their linen, their shirts. To divert their attention and close their mouths, the most surprising orgies were organized in the hospital. The government knew all this, but took no notice.

So great is the scandal, and so deeply roused is public indignation, that the government has been forced to act. M. Ger. Imbert, inspector general of the Ministry of the Interior, has completed his inquiry.

The Minister of Justice will institute a prosecution against the accountant, M. Ger. Le Frapper, who will be charged in the Assize Court with falsification of his accounts, and misappropriation of public money. The resignation of the entire Board of Administration, which has shown such culpable negligence in the control of the accounts, and in the general management of the hospitals under its charge, will be accepted.

The hospitals of Paris suffer in the same way by the change from nursing religious to lay attendants. The difference between what was necessary in the hospitals of Paris in the time of the Sisters and now, under the lay attendants, is incredible. The following items are a specimen:

Table with 3 columns: Item, Litres, and Pounds. Includes Brandy, Rum, Wine, Chart, Wines in barrel, Milk, and Sugar.

And so with the rest. So great are the abuses, and so evident the waste, that the most determined anti-Catholics, employed as doctors in these hospitals, themselves complain.

"In France," writes Dr. Desprez, whose anti-Catholic bias is well known, "there is the most fearful waste of all that should help the sick."

Dr. Desprez is a member of the Town Council of Paris. In Parliament also he several times foretold what must happen in the care of the sick with a staff which could in no sense be equal to its task. In the hospitals of Paris, no administration is so expensive, none so negligent, as the administration of lay attendants, men and women.

Up in Minnesota Mr. Olsen had a cow killed by a railroad train. In due season the claims agent for the railroad called.

"We unders and, of course, that the deceased was a very docile and valuable animal," said the claim agent in his most persuasive claim-gentlemanly manner, "and we sympathize with you and your family in your loss. But, Mr. Olsen, you must remember this: Your cow had no business being upon our tracks. Those tracks are our private property and when she invaded them she became a trespasser. Technically speaking you, as her owner, became a trespasser also. But we have no desire to carry the issue into court, and possibly give you trouble. Now, then, what would you regard as a fair settlement between you and the railroad company?"

"Val," said Mr. Olsen slowly, "Ay bane poor Swede farmer, but Ay shall give you two dollars."—Everybody's.

YOU may say bread is bread and all children want plenty of it. In a way, that's true. But it makes considerable difference whether the bread you give your children now counts just as a "filler" or whether it counts for future health. For there is a vital difference between breads made from different flours.

The most healthful as well as the cheapest food in the world is bread made from

Royal Household Flour

This bread isn't merely something to fill a hungry stomach. It is a perfectly balanced food, rich in strength-giving, blood-making material. It counts for long life. It counts for a vigorous constitution. It counts for bone and muscle making and good rich blood.

And this because "Royal Household" is made from the finest wheat in the world—the famous Red Fyfe—richest in high quality gluten, most in demand, and most valued in all the markets of the world.

"CHURCH WORK"—WHAT KIND OF WORK?

Church Work, presumably, agrees with this brilliant conception of "another correspondent"—else why are his words taken into its editorial without disapproval?

Our contemporary is not more fortunate with the translation of the word "impugnabo," (impugno) which it translates into "attack."

perseveringly, to pursue anything. 2. A. To pursue, hunt after, seek to obtain, strive after; B. with accessory notion of attainment: To obtain.

B. I. To pursue, proceed against, take vengeance upon.

It is evident that, for a man who knows anything of Latin, to translate "persequar" into the English "persecute" and to refuse to consider the other meanings of the Latin word, is most absurd, not to say unfair.

A Catholic bishop might very well "follow perseveringly" the editor of Church Work if he saw any chance of teaching him a sense of justice and fair play.

Church Work suspects our bishops of committing themselves to, it fears that they are sworn to personal violence, if we are to believe it.

Our contemporary is not more fortunate with the translation of the word "impugnabo," (impugno) which it translates into "attack."

Our readers may have wondered, some times, how it is that Catholic writers and theologians, whose works are in Latin, have been so grossly misrepresented.

Blessing the Corner-Stone of the New Church at North Sydney.

The new church at North Sydney is 130 feet long and ninety feet broad; being forty feet longer and forty feet broader than the church destroyed by fire in 1907.

On Sunday last, the ceremony of blessing the corner stone took place. The weather was unfavorable, with rain and cold easterly winds; but, notwithstanding this, the great church was filled to its capacity with a throng of people, many of whom were of other denominations.

The Catholic societies of the parish together with representatives of those from adjacent parishes, gathered at Empire Hall, and, headed by the C. M. B. A. band of Sydney Mines, marched by Commercial Street, King Street, and Prince Street, to the Church, where they were drawn up in a half circle, whilst Rev. Father McIntosh, former pastor of the parish, assisted by attending priests, proceeded with the blessing of the corner stone.

When the priests had entered the church, the choir, accompanied by cornet and three brass pieces, sang "Come Holy Ghost;" and the collection was taken up. Very Rev. Dr. Thompson then preached. Making allowances for the deficiencies of long-hand reporting, he spoke as follows:

"I have loved Oh, Lord, the beauty of thy house, and the place where thy glory dwelleth."

The words of the great psalmist express love of God, and love and respect for His holy places, where His glory dwelleth. This is not an isolated expression of such love and veneration.

Religion is spiritual in its nature; but always and at all times, respect has been taught, and felt, for those material objects which have been associated with divine worship.

If we inquire why this is so, the reasons are many and various. First,—because such material objects are God's property in a special manner.

All things are His; but some things are chosen and set apart; and these are especially sacred and belong to Almighty God in a special manner.

From the nature of religion, and the nature of man, material things have always formed an essential, though not a principal, part of religion; not the chief part, but an important, though subordinate one.

"All things bless the Lord," says the Holy Ghost, "and extol Him forever." "All ye works of the Lord, bless ye the Lord." The sea, the birds of the air, the beasts of the field; all material things are included; and we come at last to the souls of the just; all are created to praise and bless Him.

We see plainly that the service of God consists principally that of the spirits and souls of the just; yet all things, each in its own place, are intended for the honor and glory of God.

Here is one great proof—the Incarnation. God was not satisfied to dwell in the hearts of men by grace; He would take a body like unto ours; making thus a union of the material with the spiritual in its most glorious and perfect form.

How greatly should we reverence those material objects through and by means of which oceans of God's grace flow upon us. All the graces given under the old dispensation are small, as compared with those that are available to us through the merits of Our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

Salvation is the most precious of all things, all other things are, comparatively, insignificant. If we are lost eternally, of what benefit, of what use, is anything else to us. How much, then, must we prize all things which aid and help us to obtain salvation.

The poet looks with affection on his pen; the great painter loves his brush; the skilful workman likes the tool with which he does his work. They value the instruments by means of which they achieve and accomplish. How much more to be prized are the material instruments or means, by the use of which we may attain things which surpass unspcakably the temporal rewards or achievements of men.

Abraham revered the places where God had manifested Himself. Jacob after his wrestling poured oil upon the stone; and all his descendants held it sacred.

After the law of nature came the law of Moses. The tables of the Law, it was ordained, should be placed in the ark of the Covenant. The ark was adorned and beautified for the more solemn observances of religious rites. The temple at Jerusalem was built, and contained vast crowds.

If places were revered merely because the shadows of God's footsteps fell there, how much ought we to love and revere the temples wherein Jesus Christ, our God and our Redeemer, dwells, really and truly, His flesh and blood.

The form of religion that we have is far ahead of that which was known under the old law. The test of the comparison is the intensity of union between God and man. The lowest form of religion is that wherein God reveals Himself only by the light of natural reason. Jesus Christ united Himself to man by a bodily union.

This Church is to be the abiding place of Jesus Christ. Therefore, let us respect the church always. Banish flippancy, irreverence, all jests and scoffings at religions and religious persons and things. Be reverent in sacred places. Carelessness and disregard of these matters, mark the commencement of the decay of the spirit of faith and of religion.

The sermon was delivered with eloquence, clearness, and vigor, and this summary must not be supposed to do it justice.

After the sermon, the choir and orchestra rendered the Magnificat, the splendid baritone solos of Mr. J. A. Boissonneau receiving marked attention. This closed the services, and the great congregation dispersed.

Our London Letter.

LONDON, Oct. 13, 1910.

If we are to combat the heresies of the day we must combat them with their own weapons. In various parts of London there are springing up aesthetic-looking rooms, paneled in dark oak, their walls stored with books, the latest appliances for making reading both comfortable and pleasant arranged about them, and an inviting vista of their oasis of quiet presented through wide crystal paneled doors to the busy street.

Entrance is for all who pass and there are courteous attendants to assist the reader in his search after—Christian Science! These reading rooms are multiplying at quite an alarming rate and the devotees of this new cult will tell you that they gain more converts through such means than any other.

There is not one Catholic reading room in London even for subscribers, and despite the efforts of the brave little Catholic Reading Guild it is very few of the public libraries that display prominently any Catholic newspaper or other Catholic literature. But at least one reproach will be remedied in a few days, although it is only the beginnings, very faint as yet, of the realization that we must adopt the very latest devices in the battle for the minds of men, those gates through which the citadel of the soul is reached.

In a few days the first Catholic Reference Library will be opened at Westminster; the rooms, which are almost under the shadow of the Cathedral being blessed by His Grace the Archbishop of Westminster, who has appointed one of his Priests censor to the Library, to whom will be submitted all books intended for its shelves. But the scheme is not yet self-supporting and therefore in its first stages will rather take the form of a reference library for Catholic students, priests, and writers, each of whom will pay a small subscription of one guinea a year, than a fund of information for "the man in the street" whenever he feels inclined to step in. And this, although the books will all be the gift of the charitable, preliminary expense of £50 have been guaranteed and the Librarian, a lady, is giving her services gratuitously. But it is a beginning, and even its initial stages of usefulness are greatly demanded. We may hope as time goes on that the work will extend and the rooms of the Catholic Library become a rendezvous for earnest thinkers both within and without the Church.

Certainly the East end of London has never before witnessed such a scene as that which took place on Sunday in a Catholic Church which stands close to the London Docks in a densely populated and very poor neighbourhood. The Rector is a well known Irish priest, Canon Murnane, who is much beloved by his congregation. He has only recently recovered from a serious illness, during which his people knelt day and night in the Church imploring God to spare their beloved pastor, the men coming home from a hard day's work and repairing to the altar to relieve the women in their watch of prayer and love which continued all through the night.

And although the priest was said by the doctors to be stricken with a mortal disease, he recovered. He has recently returned from a pilgrimage of thanksgiving to Lourdes, and on Sunday last he invited all the afflicted members of his Parish to come that evening to a Lourdes service in the Church. They came in great numbers, a pathetic band of sufferers from every form of pain and ill health; some on crutches, some in bath chairs, some blind or deaf, many disabled by accident in one or other of the dangerous trades they follow to earn a meagre existence, others deformed from birth, or the victims of some dread disease.

There was an immense crowd of sympathisers in the streets to watch this strange procession and help its units where need be,—for there is none more sympathetic than the East end poor,—but at last they were all accommodated in the great Church and the service began. The routine of Lourdes was closely followed. The beautiful prayers being said in English, and the congregation, holding lighted candles, making the invocations after the priest. But the most touching sight was the procession of the Blessed Sacrament, the priest pausing at each row of sufferers in the benches of the Church and blessing them with the uplifted monstrance while the people begged aloud for relief from their various afflictions. One young girl rose from her bath chair after the Blessed Sacrament had passed, but slipped back exhausted a moment later. If this pious innovation, for clients of our Lady who may never be able to undertake the journey to her famous shrine did not result in any miracles, all went back to their homes with a wonderful spiritual exaltation which mercifully withdrew their thoughts from their sufferings and their pains, and their devotion to the Blessed Mother of God was visibly quickened by this participation in the rites of Lourdes.

The beloved Archbishop of Glasgow, Dr. Maguire, who has been heroically fighting against ill-health for some time, has at length had to give up his cares for a while and accompanied by his Vicar General has gone to Lourdes to seek restoration to health. In all the Churches of the Archdiocese on Sunday special prayers were said for his recovery to health, for some anxiety has been caused by the fact that since he took the waters at Carlsbad in the summer, far from improving his health has grown worse, the loss of his Doctor, a near relative having a bad effect on His Grace's nervous system.

In Edinburgh last week the annual Gaelic Mod was held with immense success. The judge in the oral and vocal competitions being Father McMillan of Benbecula in the Hebides, a lonely Parish little known outside the islands, but where the people have the same warm Catholic hearts for their priest, for Father McMillan was presented only last week with a fine new bicycle as a token of their affection and esteem, the bicycle being particularly useful in a scattered parish.

Another very important Scottish Catholic item was the marriage of the Fraser Chieftain on Saturday last which brought immense crowds to the Brompton Oratory, the fashionable world within and the public lining the pavements for a long distance without. The Bishop of Aberdeen performed the ceremony, assisted by the Bishops of Minevia and Sebastopolis, after which Dom Abraham Weld Blundell said the nuptial mass assisted by Father Chisholm and one of the Hunter Blairs, all the priests being related to the bridegroom. The bride looked very graceful in a gown of soft white satin with a long court train of rich brocade, but we really must decline to say, with the dress makers, that over this she wore "a chasuble" of point lace. If she did she had no business to, and surely fashion can go somewhere else than to the sanctuary for her frivolities.

A soft tulle veil draped over myrtle blossom flowed over the gown and was caught up here and there with sprays of orange flowers. Her page was in vieux rose velvet after an old picture by Raeburn, and her two bridesmaids, the Hon. Margaret Fraser and the Hon. Muriel Lister, looked particularly charming in gowns of white Roman satin veiled by Pekin gauze delicately edged with dark fur and outlined in blue. They wore close caps of silver lace bordered by fur and touched again with blue de ciel. Lord Lovat looked a soldierly figure in his highland dress, and his brother who acted as best man wore the full uniform of the Black Watch. At the reception in Downing Street which followed the many presents were much admired by the guests. There were tokens from both the King and Queen to the bridegroom and some magnificent jewels for Lady Lovat. Amongst the fine presents from the Highland tenantry, Lovat's Scouts and the Clan Fraser, was a pair of tartan stockings which a Scottish teacher had knitted and gained a prize therewith at a needlework exhibit. The tartan was perfectly reproduced and Lord Lovat gave his humble fellow country-

Election Card

To the Electors of District No. 4:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—At the solicitation of many of you I have come to the conclusion to be a candidate at the forthcoming election to represent you at the New Council Board. If you see proper to elect me to be your representative, I shall do my best to protect the best interests of the County in general and District No. 4 in particular.

There is no use for me to say that I will do this or do that, as I will only have one vote. That being the case, all that I can do with my vote is to use it in the best interest of the County according to my judgment. I am also of the opinion that it is high time for the farmers to know where every dollar of the road money goes, as they have lived long enough on promises. Your obedient servant, R. L. WILKINS.

Winnipeg building permits totalled $15,000,000 for the past year. Mrs. George Andrews of Dominion No. 9 succeeded on Sunday by drinking carbolic acid. The reciprocity conference with the United States will take place in Ottawa the second week in November. Because T. Waugh, a Scotchman, did not cease whistling when told, Joseph Crozenio shot him four times at O'Brien's on Sturgeon Lake, Ont. An election for the N. S. legislature will be held on Nov. 15 in Digby County, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of A. U. Gedney. Ethel LeNeve, companion of Crippen in his flight from justice, was acquitted of the charge of being an accessory to the crime of murder. The express drivers strike in New York is spreading, the men of Monahan's express, the Boston despatch, and the Manhattan delivery, 1800 in all, having joined. A wonderfully rich find of gold in the vicinity of Holon on the C. P. R. main line is reported. It is claimed to be the biggest strike made in Canada since the Yukon. Pleasant Bay, a remote settlement on the Gulf shore of Inverness county, Cape Breton, is besieged by a mice plague. Vegetables, hay, etc., are being destroyed and no remedy is in sight. Starting next month, and continuing until March, the minimum sum of money which immigrants entering Canada must have in their possession on landing, unless going to assured positions, will be $30. In the French Chamber, Saturday, Premier Briand flayed the socialists, and defended the course of the government with reference to the railway strike. A socialist vote of censure of the premier was defeated by an overwhelming vote. Harry Ham, O. Carlson and Dan Archer have been arrested at Acapulco, Mexico, in connection with the Los Angeles Times explosion. The captain and engineer of the motor boat in which they were, have also been held. A Dominion bye-election takes place in Drummond-Arthabasca today. Interest in it is general, because of the fight to capture the district from the Liberals made by Mr. Bourassa. The candidates are J. E. Perrault, Liberal, and Arthur Gilbert, Nationalist. The C. P. R., the new prospectors, of the D. A. R., will install tide elevators at Digby in connection with the Bay of Fundy service between Digby and St. John and build 120 feet extension on the present freight sheds to accommodate C. P. R.'s freight traffic. The body of Willie Joudry, a seven year-old lad, was found on Tuesday buried under a pile of moss, a short distance from his home at New Cornwall, Lunenburg Co. The lad disappeared on Sept. 17 last. Foul play is suspected. Five thousand garment workers are on strike in Chicago. The girls are rioting, and a number were arrested on Tuesday. The police were surprised to discover that several of the arrested are society women, who are encouraging the garment workers in their demand for better conditions. Springhill, N. S., is having financial troubles. The strike troubles, so frequent in the community, are bearing fruit, and the town is said to be unable to meet its obligations. The manager of the mines, J. S. Gowans, under whom most of the disputes have arisen, has resigned his position and will remove to Montreal. With his departure a brighter condition of affairs may develop. Fifty-eight names were added to the Carnegie hero list in the United States Monday. For acts of heroism thirty silver and twenty-eight bronze medals were awarded life savers. In addition, cash awards aggregating $40,250 were made in 33 of the cases, while in 13 cases where the heroes died, pensions ranging from $20 to $70 a month were made to the dependents with $5 a month additional for each child left. The following appointments have been promulgated by the minister of naval service: For Royal Naval College, Halifax, director of studies, B. S. Hartley, R. N.; Lieut., E. A. Nixon, R. N.; Engineer Lieut., E. E. Bartlett, R. N. For Halifax dockyard, commander in charge, Commander E. H. Martin, R. N., also captain of Royal Naval College and commander of the "Canada," Chief Engineer, Engineer Commander W. S. Frowd, R. N. Florence, three miles from Sydney Mines, was half destroyed by fire on Friday. The dwelling, store and barns of Conn Keigan, and the store of L. Christie were the first to go. The flames spread to the Mine Worker's hall, and from there to several residences which were burned. Two colliers, Nos. 3 and 4, of the Nova Scotia Co., employing about 1,300 men, are in the heart of the town, but the flames did not reach them. The loss is about $50,000 and the insurance about $50,000. The four great towers which rise several hundred feet above the sea at the Marconi wireless station at Glace Bay and which have been the principal outward features of the wireless telegraphy, are now obsolete. Manager G. C. Whitmore, of the Glace Bay station, expresses the wish that somebody would take the picturesque skyscrapers off his hands. "Our work now has progressed so well that we find the towers do no more service than we obtain from four ordinary masts of 180 feet," said Mr. Whitmore. Mr. Whitmore declares that experiments at Glace Bay and on the Irish coast have convinced the Marconi experts that it is possible to conduct regular communication between stations on each coast situated fifty miles apart. Each would be attuned to a corresponding station on the other side, and each pair would work perfectly without interference, he believes.

To the Editor of the Casket: DEAR SIR.—In my first letter I tried to make my position clear without taking too much of your valuable space. From Mr. J. J. McNeil's letter in your issue of Oct. 27th it is evident that I failed in my purpose in one instance at least. My contention was and is that human nature being what it is, our so-called prohibitive legislation is a mistake. With all deference to Mr. McNeil, I hold that it is not easy to point out the best way to pursue in this matter. Eminent men who have made a special study of this question are far from sanguine. It is only small men of narrow vision who can settle it off hand. When you say to a man I will not let you have a drink (or most anything else for that matter) he at once says I will have it. We have too many laws on the statute book that are not enforced, some of which even the framers do not expect to see carried out to the letter. And to go on adding to them is a mistake. Would it not be better to direct our energies to education, persuasion and example? Passing only such laws as can be thoroughly enforced, and see to it that they are so enforced. So long as the world is constituted as it is to day, men will use alcoholic beverages, laws or no laws. Surely then it is better to so arrange matters that they may get them in their least injurious forms and without breaking any laws. Such at least is the opinion of your humble servant. Several of Mr. McNeil's remarks invite replies in kind but you would, I am sure, prefer that we discuss the question, rather than one another. Thanking you for space, I remain, YOURS, COUNTRYMAN.

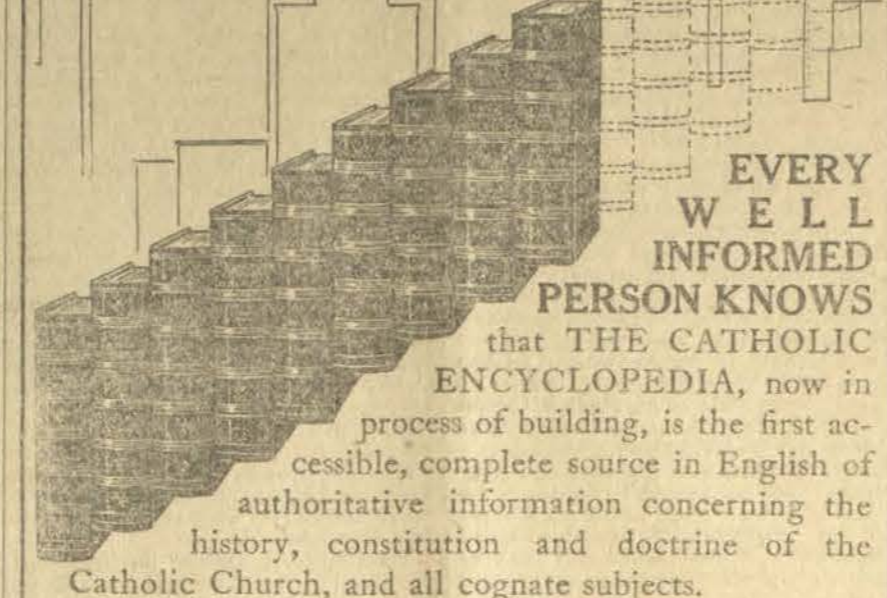

Our London Letter.

(Continued from page 4) woman's gift a notable place amongst the presents. The Catholic Defence League, which was mooted by Father Dowling at the First National Catholic Congress in Leeds, has met with wide approval from all parts of the world, and the good priest is encouraged to continue working to place his great scheme on a workable footing. The Archbishop of Westminster has been looked on encouragingly and will be considered by the Bishops of the Province at their next meeting. The recent events have illustrated the valuable work which lies before such an association, and it has been suggested that Father Dowling should undertake a lecturing campaign through the country, sending the Fiery Cross round, as we might say in Scotland, and calling on the great Clan Catholic to "Arm! for your altars and your fires, Arm! for the green graves of your sires, God and your native land." Considerable interests have been created by the announcement that the charming young Catholic actress Miss Pauline Chase is to wed the daring aviator, Mr. Graham White. They are a very popular couple, though if Mr. White insists on an early marriage London will be desolate at Christmas without the "Peter Pan" who has won all hearts in J. M. Barrie's delightful hardy perennial of the "Boy who wouldn't grow up." This little bit of professional gossip reminds me that another well-known author and prospective dramatist, Mr. Pett Pidge, is giving his services to-night in London in aid of the Catholic Federation, by a reading from some of the delightfully humorous stories he weaves about the shabby genteel corners of this vast city. Though not himself a Catholic, Mr. Pett Pidge has often been seen at Catholic Churches and has a wide and appreciative audience amongst Catholics for his books while intensely human and exceedingly amusing, are such as any Catholic parent might present to the growing generation, a complement which can be paid to so few novelists nowadays, when reputations are made because of riskiness, rather than in spite of it. Residents and visitors to the Isle of Wight had the rare opportunity of witnessing the solemn reception of a Benedictine nun this week when the first novice to make her perpetual vows at the new settlement here, was received by Bishop Cotter. The ceremonies attending the profession of the great religious orders are very beautiful and impressive. Miss Rachel Thurston, in religion, Mame Rachel Benedict, was met at the door of the Priory by his Lordship the Bishop and his attendant clergy. She was robed as a bride and attended by a bevy of young girls in white. After the altar had been read, a solemn High Mass was begun by his Lordship and after the Epistle the Litany of the Saints was chanted while the novice lay prostrate before the altar. She then received the habit, veil and ring, and after she had donned them was crowned with a garland of flowers while the choir of nuns chanted the lovely "Jussum Coronum Virginiae." The Bishop gave a touching address and after the conclusion of Mass at which the newly professed received Communion, she was received at the convent door by the Lady Abbess, the Prioress and all the nuns of the convent, who now number about thirty. There was a very large gathering of lay folk, friends and relatives, for the occasion. Such ceremonies as this, touching in their great beauty and simplicity yet so unfamiliar to the Catholics of these islands that few can follow them, bring home to one the thought of all the Reformations that have passed, at the same time as they impress us with the unapproachable beauty of the Church of God, clothed in the vesture of light and life, and hung about with these lovely virgin lives like so many precious pearls. The 9th Colossal Step into a New Book World

EVERY WELL INFORMED PERSON KNOWS that THE CATHOLIC ENCYCLOPEDIA, now in process of building, is the first accessible, complete source in English of authoritative information concerning the history, constitution and doctrine of the Catholic Church, and all cognate subjects. What is not so generally known is the fact that The Catholic Encyclopedia is just as interesting and valuable to non-Catholics, to adherents of all denominations—or of no religion—as it is to Catholics. TO THE LAWYER, THE PHYSICIAN, THE ARCHITECT, THE ARTIST, THE MUSICIAN, THE STUDENT OF LITERATURE, OF SCIENCE, OF CIVIC, SOCIAL AND POLITICAL ECONOMY—in fact to every man who reads and who needs an authoritative source of information—this great Encyclopedia strongly appeals. In his own field he will find the pages veritable mines of knowledge. There is little of real value in history that is not to be found in this compendium of "the world of men and things that the Catholic Church affects."

The Catholic Encyclopedia not only opens up new fields of knowledge, but it is all new in every page—not an article copied from any other source. Every one of its 30,000 subjects is treated specially and signed by one of its staff of over 1,000 contributors—the picked men of the world's qualified scholars. VOLUME IX IS NOW READY The beautiful new brochure of The Catholic Encyclopedia, elaborately illustrated, and full information, will be sent without charge, on application to Robert Appleton Company, 39 West 38th Street, New York. DIED At River Denys Road, C. B., on Oct. 24th, JOHN CAMERON, aged 80, leaving three daughters and three sons. He suffered, with considerable patience a long painful illness. He died full of hope in the mercy of Jesus. He was buried with a funeral Mass, R. I. P. At Brown's Mt. Ant., on the morning of Oct. 24th, 1910, after receiving the last rites of Holy Church, MARY beloved wife of PETER HASSEY, at the age of 72 years, leaving a sorrowful husband, two sons, three daughters, one sister and ten grandchildren to mourn her loss. R. I. P. At Cape George Point, on October 6th, after a short illness, in the 76th year of his age, ALLAN DARR, an honest and respectable citizen. The deceased was born at Hillsborough, Inverness Co. C. B., and moved to Cape George 22 years ago. Through industry and thrift he became one of our most prosperous farmers. He leaves a wife, three sons and four daughters to mourn his loss. He was married to Margaret McEachern, daughter of the late Allan McEachern of Ligonis Cove. Donald Macdonald, an old and highly respected citizen of Chelsea, Mass., at his home, 31 Jefferson Avenue on Thursday, Oct. 28th, 1910. The funeral took place from St. Rose Church at nine o'clock on Saturday morning. Solemn High Mass for interment. The deceased was born in Arisaig, N. S., seventy-six years ago, the son of John and Sarah (McGivray) Macdonald. He removed to Chelsea over forty years ago, and at that time engaged in the lumber business in East Boston which he continued until illness compelled him to retire. He was a man of sterling qualities, honest and conscientious, respected among men, and a kind father to his family. He leaves four daughters and two sons, one of whom John Macdonald is an assistant in the City Engineer's office. May he rest in peace. GRACE A. McETHIE, aged 21 years, a former resident of Antigonish, at Boldside, C. B., on Wednesday, Oct. 6th after a few illness for several years the deceased was organist at St. Andrew's Church, Boldside, C. B., and was much favoured known in the vicinity. Her death following a life so pure and gentle was most edifying. Fully aware of her approaching end she calmly submitted to the will of God. Her remains, accompanied by Rev. Jas. McDonald, P. C., of Boldside, were brought to Antigonish on Friday. The funeral took place on Saturday morning after a requiem High Mass, celebrated by Rev. J. A. McIsaac, of Little Bras-D'Or. Among the mourners were her three sisters who are religious of the order of St. Martha. Two brothers Neil of Glace Bay and John of Sydney were also present. School Children and Daily Mass.

PAPER READ AT THE EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS BY REV. H. J. CANNING.

We who enjoy the privilege of Catholic schools are wont to thank God for such a blessing; and rightly so, for the child whose religious instruction has been ignored, humanly speaking, can never make up for the past. But for many years I have wondered if our teachers really understood what is meant by a Catholic primary education.

The same reasoning applies even more forcibly to the teaching of the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass. I have known teachers who spend weeks in the chapters of the catechism dealing with this subject. I am not finding fault with this, but I am finding fault with the fact that they never thoroughly put their teaching into practice—they didn't succeed in getting things done.

I need not stop here to point out the immediate spiritual benefits to children arising from daily attendance at Mass; they are the same as those obtained by adults. Without then going into the question of these spiritual riches, we shall endeavor to deal with the practical side of the question by discussing the means whereby children may be brought to daily Mass, so as to obtain these riches; but especially the means whereby they may be so drawn that they will practice going, when possible, in more mature years.

What means shall we use to get the child to daily Mass? Some teachers advocate compulsion; but there is a danger of the child getting a surfeit of it; not that anyone can get too much of a good thing, but he may think he is getting too much, and when, in after years, he is free, may refuse to take even what is necessary.

The impulse from the earth was given, but bent aim in the ways of heaven.

Besides, it has the value of accustoming them to daily Mass without compelling them. And this is much. But at best such means of securing attendance, that is, compulsion or emulation, will be productive of lasting results only in rare cases, and any means that does not make for a continuation in after life is a comparative failure.

Indian Summer. How the years steal on and what stealthily have they caused! A year ago I would have refused to believe it. Smith used to walk down town with me every morning. He had been through a hard siege, but weathered it, and apparently was all right again.

once a year about it. They went on the second Sunday, but fifteen minutes of the preceding Sunday was given up every month to a talk on the subject, while an equal time was taken on the Communion Sunday itself. It meant energy, it meant perseverance, it meant labor, but it worked out rightly. I know another priest who never has a school child miss his monthly Communion during the summer vacation. He accomplished this important work by frequently impressing on them that they did not go to Holy Communion for the sake of the teacher or parents or priest, but for the sake of God and the good of their souls.

I believe, then, that in the matter of the daily Mass, if the same energy and perseverance were adopted, results equally good could be readily obtained. But, as I said before, results will not be obtained by an occasional talk on the matter. The priest must inculcate it at every opportunity; but he must be full of resources so as not to tire the children. Concrete questions with regard to the Mass itself will play an important part, because they arouse interest. I honestly believe that a large percentage of our people do not know just at what point in the Mass the consecration takes place.

In a few cases where there were two priests attached to a church, I have known excellent results to have been obtained in the way of interesting the children by having them supplied with a simple uniform prayer book. These books were distributed at the beginning of the Mass and collected at the end. While one priest offered the Sacrifice the other stood among the children, and as the Mass went on he quietly told them at what part the celebrant was and what he was reading. I know the Church forbids a priest to explain the Mass from the pulpit while another celebrates, but I scarcely think that this would cover the case of the pastor telling the little children where and what to read in their prayer-books at the Mass proceeds.

The vulgar rich. SCORED BY FATHER VAUGHAN FOR DENYING DECALOGUE TO CARRY ON OPEN VICE. Father Vaughan, the "Mayfair Jesuit," as they call him in London, because he is of the aristocratic class, but inveighs against the smart, today stated his grievance against the merely rich. It is that they seek to nullify the decalogue and have become a menace by pretending that there is no such thing as sin.

Yesterday and the day before he was as well as ever. This weakness is all nonsense. Of course he could not do a hundred yards dash or take part in a football game, but he is sound and healthy. His mirror tells him he is all right. He goes on confident yet troubled, until the time when sickness lays its heavy hand on him.

What we want to-day is character dominated by lofty and holy principles. It is difficult to grow characters such as I refer to, in the hereditary or in the environments, or with the education belonging to this inner circle of gilded luxury and license.

The vulgar rich talk about people being dull. Why, if there were a world-wide competition for dullness and a smart stupidity, the prize would be carried off by this class. "Smart society is the same the world over. It has no intellectual conversation, no artistic talent, no appreciation of character. It has no standard by which to gauge anything except the standard of the bank note."

ashamed of. Now they are not afraid to do wrong things in the open as if proud of them.

"This class, with such a point of view, is a menace. This wrong-doing is done before servants who supply wholesale to the shops at which they deal the ghastly story of gilded vice. On the beaches of South Australia is to be found a peculiar kind of seaweed, like hair-pads, which seems destined to become a tremendous commercial asset. An account of it is given by Alice Grant Roman in The Lone Hand.

The Posidonia australis is to be found all round the southern coast of South Australia, and in tremendous quantities in Spencer and St Vincent's Gulfs. According to J. M. Black, the South Australian botanist, "It is not an Alga or seaweed proper, as it has greenish flowers and a fleshy fruit somewhat smaller than an olive. The important part of the plant, considered commercially, is the fibrous remains of the leaf sheaths which cover the base of the stem. These fibres are larger and finer than those of Posidonia oceanica, the only other species of the genus, which is found in Mediterranean waters and along the coasts of the Atlantic in Europe."

Posidonia australis grows on a limestone bottom; but the action of the tide, through many centuries, has sifted over it masses of shells and sand, until the plant, forcing its way upwards, lies on a deposit of its own fibre, intermixed with the sand and shells, and varying in thickness from four to twenty feet.

At Tickera, Moonta Bay, and elsewhere in South Australian waters, these deposits have been found to stretch for several miles, and the quantity of fibre has been pronounced by experts to be practically inexhaustible.

A measure was passed by the South Australian Parliament, authorizing the government to issue licenses for the raising of the fibre over specified areas, and various companies have been formed with a view to experimenting.

In Moonta Bay, by means of post-hole augers and other appliances, trial holes were put down from high-water mark out to the low tide level, a distance of several miles. In every boring experiment the fibre was found reaching to a depth of nine feet or more, and underlying an overburden of from one to eighteen inches.

Samples of the fibre, cleaned and dried, prove to possess many valuable properties. It is not inflammable, except at a tremendously high temperature, and for this reason has a distinct advantage over flock, kapok, oakum, etc. For bedding and upholstery purposes it has been found to have the lightness and softness of flock, while its purity, and the utter absence of animal life, give it a sanitary value above most materials used for stuffing purposes.

Samples of cloth woven from a mixture of wool and fibre, and quantities of the raw material dyed various colors testify to its utility in this direction; while other purposes for which it has been pronounced adaptable are rope, string, twine, mats, linoleum, army blankets, paper; packing fruit, eggs, etc., for export, caulking decks and woodwork of ships, stuffing saddles, insulating doors to cool chambers instead of wool, packing round submarine cables in place of oakum.

Of the existence of this fibre in tremendous quantities there can be no possible doubt; and its utility when raised, cleaned and dried is also beyond question, but—the inevitable but—What is less certain is the possibility of raising and preparing it for the market at a cost that can successfully compete with such products as kapok, flock, oakum, couchair, etc.
