

Men of the World.

Many a man is kneeling to-night In dreams by a mother's knee, Drifting back through his days of care To the things that used to be.

THE REVENGE.

A LEGEND OF VALLOMBROSA.
(From the Tidings.)

It was a summer's eve in the year of 1073. The cool shades were rising from behind the rugged Apennines and were gathering over the pale cloisters in the deep valley of the Arno.

It was a beautiful morning of some fifty years previous, when a body of armed men might have been seen standing in a shady valley without the walls of Florence, around the dead body of a youth, fair and noble even in death.

Several weeks have passed, and it is the morning of Good Friday. Count Stefano had fled on discovery of the murder, knowing well that revenge was sure to follow; but Giovanni, true to his evil resolve, was still in pursuit of him.

mood by the voice of his valet, who called out: "The murderer! Count Stefano,"—and, in a moment the two nobles stood face to face.

There was a struggle in Giovanni's breast, but God's grace, which had already commenced to operate in his soul, gained the victory.

Such was the remembrance which drew tears from the eyes of the aged monk; and well it might be so, for that aged monk was Stefano, and the dying Abbot was Giovanni, now known to us as St. John Gualbert.

"Return Cross to St. Sophia" Balkan War Cry.

CRESCENT NOW SURMOUNTS DOME OF GREAT CHURCH IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

(By William T. Ellis, in Philadelphia North American.)

Back of the Balkan situation lies a great popular passion. An elemental, overmastering human purpose has had more to do with beginning and prosecuting the wonderful war than all the schemes of chancelleries and war offices.

That "great idea," which is nothing less than a racial and a religious passion, is the return of the cross to St. Sophia. This is the war cry of the batling Christians, the pent-up determination of centuries.

Honored above all the heroes of war will be the hand that undoes this ancient desecration of the oldest and largest of all existing Christian edifices.

CROSS IS TEST OF FAITH.

There is nothing in American life by which this deep human passion for a great religious ideal may be measured.

Once, when visiting the ruins of the Church of St. John the Divine, in the Epheus, I caught my horse-boy, a poor, untutored peasant, fervently kissing one of the old marble crosses, is still more revered as the scene of great church councils, and as identifi-fied with the names of the church fathers during the years when the teaching of the lowly Nazarene was assuming imperial dimensions.

COVERED CHRISTIAN MOSAICS.

This triumph of eastern art had on its walls rich mosaics, showing the Christ, the cross and scenes from sacred history. All of these the Turks carefully plastered over, so that no vestige of the Christian character of the building might remain.

Almost prophetic is the fact that recently the plaster has been wearing off the walls, and the mosaics are beginning to show through. The cross is coming back! A little less than two years ago I went into the mosque alone, having previously visited it with a guide.

My quest was a search for crosses.
Again and again, as I examined the walls in that liberty of movement which mosques permit to their own people, I found plaster after plaster being removed and the ancient Christian emblems, hidden for nearly five centuries, were reappearing.

A sudden interruption came to my musings when I found myself being cursed in Turkish by a green-turbaned descendant of the prophet. I disregarded this, but the number of men who followed and cursed the infidel grew. It was during the feast of Ramadan, and evening, and the poor beggars were hungry!

So I sauntered among the fountains in the courtyard and bought beads from Mecca of the hucksters who sell sacred mementoes to pilgrims. As I left my uppermost speculation was when the day would come that the prayers of millions of Christians would be answered and the cross would once more have its rightful place in and on that building so fraught with memories.

CRACK IN THE GREAT DOME.

Like most things Turkish, St.
Sophia has been neglected, and a crack has recently appeared in the great dome. This will be lovingly repaired by Christian hands. In the gallery around the dome are stored the secret reports of Abdul Hamid's spies, secured in the Yildiz palace at the time of the revolution.

Old Stamboul, as the part of Constantinople is called where St. Sophia is situated, is one of the four cities which have exerted the profoundest influence upon the human race. It ranks with Jerusalem, Rome and Athens being the only other cities in the same class.

Like the Roman emperors, the earlier sultans have had their palaces in old Stamboul, and where the point of the city projects into the water the seraglio stands, eloquent of countless intrigues and bloody deeds. Abdul Hamid removed his residence across the Golden Horn, as the horn-shaped estuary of the Bosphorus is called, to the newer section of the city, called Galata. But the sublime porte and other government offices remain in Stamboul.

Origin of a Saying.

"A feather in one's cap," is derived from Scotland. Among the woodcraft enthusiasts it was the custom for the individual first to kill a woodcock to pluck out a feather and place it in his cap. Oliver Cromwell conferred dignity upon this expression when, on his refusal of the English crown, he observed: "Royalty is but a feather in a man's cap."

Belfast's "Prosperity."

The following from the Dublin Leader is another picture of Belfast prosperity which is so much boasted of by Unionists and paraded on Orange platforms as an argument for British rule in Ireland and against Home Rule:

"Not in the whole civilized world is there, at the present time, such utter heartless slavery as the work of the great spinning mills of Belfast. It would be an eye-opener for some of the philanthropic members of the Irish Health Association to just pass an hour in these over-heated mills, "And to avoid this, the young womanly body is doomed to a stooping position for the entire work-day, and it is easy to see how this ends. Just as healthful exercises develop the frame, the unnatural posture weakens and contracts it. No inspector or health officer pays heed to this wanton waste of health, and the months and years pass, bringing premature age and infirmity to the Belfast mill-girls. One may sadly note in the dense armies of working women,

"Little mites in their earliest teens seem to have decades of toil imprinted on their ashly cheeks, and are all too surely qualifying for the fell consumption microbe. In connection with the half-timers, it is a stigma on the Belfast mill-owners that they do not supply footgear to their little slaves. A few years back a pitying English actor, on tour in Belfast,

"An hour's interval is given for dinner (outside) and twenty minutes for indoor tea. Wednesday is half-holiday, but this spell of leisure is compensated by extra time being exacted on Friday nights till ten o'clock; and on Saturday till 11-30,

The Cure.

She was not an attractive girl in any way, and she knew it. She was restless and cross, and unhappy, and growing more unattractive in looks and manners as she became older.

"Madeline, do you want to be a torment to yourself and everybody about you all your life?" was the blunt and astounding question that she put to her niece one day.

"No, of course not," was the prompt and half-frightened reply from the astonished girl.

For a few minutes she was cros-seder than ever. Then common sense saved the day. She tried the cure—honestly, sincerely, prayerfully; and to her own lifelong joy—to say nothing of everybody else—there was soon no happier, more attractive, more lovable girl in the place than she.

The First Cold.

It may not be amiss to sound a note of warning just at this season on the subject of catching cold. Too many people begin the winter with the handicap of a cold either on the chest or, if they are lucky, only in the head.

Care of the Hair.

One of the most necessary items in the care of the hair is the thing which so many women forget or do not trouble about—the loosening of the scalp. If the scalp does not move readily there is not the necessary circulation of blood, and it is then inevitable that the hair should fall and turn grey. It takes through massage to loosen up a tight scalp; but if a woman can not take professional treatment she can do something at it herself. Give fifteen minutes a day to it, at first, taking frequent rests, for it is tiring to hold the hand above the head and exert the necessary pressure.

How Much of Your Road Money is Spent in Filling Ruts?
IF the millions of dollars that have been spent repairing worn-out, washed-out streets and roads had been used to build more miles of good highways, fewer farmers would now be wasting valuable time and money taking "round-about" routes to town.
FIRST cost of an ordinary dirt or macadam road is usually only a "starter." The cost of upkeep soon equals that first cost and there is always an ever-increasing annual expense for repairs. The worst feature of it is that such a road is never a really first-class highway.
IN estimating the cost of a road you should include the expense of keeping it in good condition for at least twenty years. If you don't, you're figuring on the first payment for that road, only. And the remaining payments are as certain as taxes. The upkeep cost of concrete roads is practically nothing.
Concrete roads are the best roads from the first—and the best and cheapest roads at the end of ten, fifteen and twenty years.
CONCRETE is the ideal paving material for streets in small towns as well as for main highways in the country.
Edward N. Hines, Wayne County, Michigan, Road Commissioner, and one of America's foremost authorities on good roads, says: Any community that wants a good road, a road that is cheaper for even a short time under fairly heavy traffic than any other good road, a road that is inexpensively maintained, a road that is sanitary and dustless, a road that is not slippery, a road that affords good traction for any type of vehicle 365 days in the year, a road that in the long run, say 10, 15, 20 years and longer, is the cheapest of all good roads, should investigate the merits of concrete.
WRITE for the facts about Concrete highways. When convinced, use your influence to have the roads for which you pay built to last.
We have highway experts who will visit any community intending to build more roads and explain just why and how concrete roads are best and cheapest.

THE HISTORY OF HATRED.

that the reign of Charles II. was not one of the worst for Ireland. The king, weak and worthless as he was, had in his heart some sympathy for the Catholics; and the penal laws were, by his influence, neglected to a great extent in their enforcement in Ireland during his reign.

One other event of this reign made a profound impression on Catholic Ireland; and it is not yet forgotten. We refer to the murder of Archbishop Plunket; for murder it was, though done under forms of law.

Dr. Oliver Plunket was Archbishop of Armagh. His labors had been most devoted. He had administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to 48,000 persons—chiefly in the open air, often in storm and rain.

The evil days of Titus Oates came; and "the Popish plot" was huggd to the hearts of the English people. Protestant historians have exhausted their vocabularies in denouncing Oates and his imitators.

Though the warrants were out against him, he continued to visit the sick, to administer the Sacraments, to attend to his people. Hidden in garrets, or in the woods, he stuck to his duties. He was arrested, a host of informers were at hand to swear his life away.

The Titus Oates frauds blew up directly afterwards. In fact, Oates was arrested the very day after Archbishop Plunket was hanged.

Four years later, Charles II. died. Ireland seemed to be peaceful, with the only kind of peace England ever thought was good for her—the peace of exhaustion, and disengagement. But Ireland has impudently persisted in refusing to remain quiet under such conditions.

The world, however, even the Protestant world, has grown skeptical on that subject.

Our London Letter.

LONDON, Nov 9th, 1912.

DEPARTURE OF THE PUTOMAYO MISSIONERS. Seldom has the Franciscan Monastery at Forest Gate witnessed such scenes as last Sunday, when the Missioners chosen for the Putomayo were present at a farewell service.

ENGLAND'S DANGER. The Divorce Commission's report is even worse than was at first expected, and before this country there now lies one of the most momentous questions she has ever been called upon to decide.

Government to disallow the snap division on Home Rule taken the other day. In which they were defeated, this vital question looms largest in the considerations of the public.

MORALITY AND HUMANITARIANISM. Another big question, the White Slave Traffic which is being tackled at last by legislation, is suffering from the backboneless spirit of the age.

THE NEW MYSTIC.

This materialism which shrinks from physical pain or even discomfort and talks largely of moral punishments because it knows so well the moral conscience of its followers is too blunt to feel pain, appears in all walks of life.

A SILVER JUBILEE. There have been a large number of social engagements this week. The first great gathering of Catholics was the Ransomers Reunion at Caxton Hall, which took a special importance this year from the fact that it was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of this good Society.

FESTIVITIES. Then we have had the annual Aonach with us during the greater part of the week, or rather we have been with the Irish festival at the Horticultural Hall, Westminster, where every description of Irish industry is represented in the most attractive form.

TRIUMPH FOR ARCHBISHOP WALSH.

The attempt of Mr. Campbell, M. P., to justify his statements regarding Archbishop Walsh's attitude to Trinity College, Dublin, has had a crushing defeat. Amongst the statements he made was the remark that although Lord Rathmore had annihilated Trinity, His Grace had never repudiated that accusation made at the time of the speech in 1880.

FATHER MCKENZIE, EAST BAY, C. B., PASSED AWAY YESTERDAY MORNING.

As this issue of THE CASKET was about ready for the press, we were shocked and grieved beyond expression by the news of the death of the Reverend Michael McKenzie, the kind-hearted, beloved and exemplary parish priest of East Bay, Cape Breton.

Father McKenzie will be greatly missed in this Diocese. Ever faithful to every trust reposed in him as pastor, administrator, or friend, widely known and universally respected, his was a life "That silent moved to gracious ends 'Mong' loops of unrecording friends, A deedful life, a silent voice."

Unassuming, simple and gentle in manner, inexpressibly genial and kind in disposition, energetic and zealous in the discharge of every priestly duty, he was indeed a priest among priests, a man among men.

The son of Donald McKenzie and Mary (Campbell) McKenzie, the late pastor of East Bay was born at Red Islands, in the County of Richmond, in August, 1846. His preliminary education was obtained in the schools of his native district, and in the Arichat Academy, in St. Francis Xavier's College, Antigonish, he studied for five years (1869 to 1873), and from there he passed, in September, 1873, into the Grand Seminary, the Theological Department of Laval University, in the City of Quebec.

The funeral is to take place on Friday morning, at 9 o'clock.

Bishop Morrison at Glace Bay.

His Lordship arrived at Glace Bay last Saturday night. He was accorded a generous welcome by his Catholic people and by citizens generally, Main and Commercial Streets, through which he passed in reaching the church from the street car, being thronged by people.

In his reply to the addresses, His Lordship expressed his sincere thanks to all for the fine reception tendered him, for the words of welcome and good wishes in the addresses. He complimented the town upon its great industrial progress, and assured the large gathering that he would always take the deepest interest in the spiritual and temporal welfare of the people of Glace Bay.

On Sunday His Lordship celebrated Pontifical High Mass and administered confirmation to upwards of 500 persons.

In the afternoon His Lordship was given a reception by the ladies and children of the parish, some 800 children participating in a grand chorus of welcome. Here, too, he was tendered an address, the reader thereof being John Mullins, a bright lad. In addressing the gathering Bishop Morrison praised the good work of the women's societies, and spoke of the church's interest in the welfare of the children.
